

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. INDEX V.

INDEX TO PROPER NAMES, AND TO SOME OF THE PRINCIPAL SUBJECTS IN PIERS PLOWMAN AND RICHARD THE REDELES.

*. The numbers refer, in general, to the Passus and Line of the C-text; when the reference is to the A-text or B-text, the letter "a" or "b" is prefixed to the numbers denoting the Passus and Line. References to Richard the Redeles are similarly denoted by prefixing the letter "R." When the italic letter "n" is subjoined to such numbers, the reference is to the various readings given in the notes at the foot of the page.

The corresponding lines in the B-text or A-text can soon be found by consulting the reference-numbers in thick type in the margin of the C-text, which give the corresponding pages.

Abbot of Abingdon; see Abingdon.

This index includes all the proper names, including those of the allegorical personages mentioned in these poems, together with some of the principal subjects. But Index I, beginning at p. 464, should also be consulted for further help in finding passages treating of any required subject.

For proverbs, see under "Proverbs," both in this Index and in Index I

(p. 483). For similes, see under "Similes."

INDEX VI.

GLOSSARY OF WORDS.

When numbers are used without any symbol preceding them, the references are to the Passus and Line of the C-text. References to the B-text and A-text invariably have "b." or "a." prefixed to the numbers. References to Richard the Redeles have "R." prefixed.

References to which "n" is subjoined are to words occurring, not in the text, but in the various readings in the foot-notes.

Besides the abbreviations s., adj., adv., for substantive, adjective, adverb, &c., the following are used in a special sense:—v., a verb in the infinitive mood; pr. s. present tense, 3rd person singular; pr. pl. present tense, 3rd person plural; pt. s., past tense, 3rd person singular; pt. pl. past tense, 3rd person plural. Other persons are denoted by the figures 1 or 2.

The etymology of words is given occasionally, in the case of the more difficult words. Languages are cited in the usual manner, as O.F. for Old French, A.S. for Anglo-Saxon, and the like.

A large number of references are given, but they are by no means exhaustive, so that this Glossarial Index falls considerably short of being a concordance. More references can often be found by turning from one Text to the parallel passages in the others. I hope I have included nearly all words to which any interest is likely to be attached. Many varieties of spelling are recorded; and, in the case of verbs, every form is duly parsed.

When the modern English form is noted (as e.g. mod. E. abash under Abasched), the etymology is to be found in my Etymological Dictionary.

References to "notes" are to the Notes in the present volume.

Miss Jackson thus explains it in her Shropshire Wordbook. "An iron link is attached to the gate by means of a staple: this link is terminated by a short hasp-like bolt. On the gate-post is an iron plate, having in it a kind of key-hole, into which the before-mentioned bolt fits, much after the manner of the fastening of a trunk, thus securing the gate." From F. cliquet, which Cotgrave explains as "the ring, knocker, or hammer of a doore; from the verb cliquer, to click or snap, a word of imitative origin. The Welsh clicied, a door-latch, is borrowed from the West of England clicket, not vice versa. The M.E. cliket also means a kind of latch-key, as in Chaucer, C. T. 9990. See Cath. Cokeney, cook's assistant, scullion, inferior cook, 9. 309; Kokeney, b. 6. 287; Cokeneyes, pl. scullions, a. 7. 272. I have now no doubt at all that this difficult word (whence mod. E. cockney) answers to an O.F. coquine — Low Lat. coquinatus, from coquinare, to cook, serve as scullion, a derivative of Lat. coquina. It is easily seen how coquinatus might mean either (1) a person connected with the kitchen, as in M.E. cokeney, a scullion; (2) a child brought up in the kitchen, or pampered by servants, as in E. cockney, often used in this sense; and (3) a hanger-on to a kitchen, or pifering rogue, whence F. coquin, as in Cotgrave. (The explanation in vol. i. p. viii, is wrong.)

Declyned, pt. s. declined, parsed,
a. 4. 133 n.

Decorreth, pr. s. departs (of = from), b. 14. 193. In the note, p. 330, I explain it by 'particularises,' from F. discourir. Mätzner, however, offers another explanation, viz. 'ablaufen, zu Ende gehen, schwinden.' This he attributes to the O.F. decorre, decourre; Cotgrave gives decourir, but only in the senses 'to run down, to haste, or hye apace; also, to purge downwards.' Taking decorreth of to mean 'flows away from, recedes from, glides away from, departs from,' the line signifies, 'the record departs from pomp and pride (has nothing to do with them), and especially from every one but the lowly.

Elenge, adj. exile-like; hence, miserable, wretched, b. 10. 94 n, b. 20. 2 n; Elynge, 1. 204, 23. 2, b. 20. 2 (also a false reading in a. 8. 131 n); Elyng, b. pr. 100, b. 10. 94. See notes, pp. 24, 240. In a note to his Sprachproben, i. 148, Mätzner shews that the sense is rather 'miserable' than 'lonely' in most of the passages where it occurs; yet the word fairly includes the sense of 'solitary' or 'lonely,' as still used in Kent. It is true that it corresponds to the G. elend, miserable, but the orig. sense of this word (see Weigand) was 'exiled,' or (literally) 'in a foreign land.' The M.E. elenge is, in fact, a corruption of A.S. ellend or ele-lænde (see Bosworth), meaning 'foreign,' lit. 'in an alien land.' It is compounded of el- or ele-, strange, alien (allied to Lat. ali-us), and land, land, country. Hence the sense is—in an alien land, exiled, miserable, solitary, wretched, &c.

Hele; in phr. pye hele (or heele, or hyle), 10. 345; a. 8. 181; pies hele (v. r. pese hule), b. 7. 194. See note, p. 200. The most likely sense is, I think, 'a remaining piece of a pie,' or else, 'a piecrust.' I have already referred to Halliwell, who gives heel as meaning the rind of cheese, or the crust of bread; but more light is thrown on the word by the Shropshire heel, as to which I copy the following from Miss Jackson's Word-book. " Heel. the top crust of a loaf cut off, or the bottom crust remaining. 'Cut a loaf through to sen' to the leasow, that 'eel oonna be enough' [i. e. cut a new loaf in half, to for that remaining crust will not be enough]. Burns has kebbuck-heel, i. e. the remaining part of a cheese, in his Holy Fair." Perhaps the orig. sense was 'cover,' hence 'rind' or 'crust,' from the verb hele, to cover, below. It was probably believed, in popular etymology, to be the same word as the mod. E. heel of the foot. See Hule.

Oilles, pl. oils, hence, flattery; Beringe vppon oilles = the use of flattery, lit. 'the bearing of oil upon (a great man); R. 3. 186. This very curious phrase is illustrated in N. and Q. 6. S. i. 75, 118, 203. We find "hilde vp be kynges oyl," lit. held up the king's oil, flattered or abetted him; Trevisa, iii. 447; "holden up his oile" == approve of what he (a king) says, Gower, ed. Pauli, ili. 159; "to bere up oile" = to say he (Ahab) was in the right, id. iii. 172; in all the passages it has reference to a king whose opinions are upheld by flatterers. Again, Ps. cxli. 5 has, in the Vulgate, "Oleum autem peccatoris non impinguet caput meum;" which Wyclif translates "the oyle of a synner [shal] make not fat myn heed;" and Bellarmine's commentary has — "Significat blandiloquentiam adulatoris." In Cath. Angl. p. 120, fagynge is explained by "blanditia, . . adulacio, . . oleum, ut in psalmo, oleum autem peccatoris," &c. Mr. Marshall (in N. and Q.) says that "oleum ore ferre" is noticed as a proverb in Adagia, p. 28, fol., Typ. Wechel, 1629. Cf. mod. E. "to butter a person."

Paragals, pl. companions, R. 1. 71, A paragal (O.F. paragel, later parageau) is properly 'a younger brother, who by partition enjoys part of the land descended from his ancestor;' Cotgrave. Moreover, such a younger brother shared equally with his elders; Cotgrave also gives parageur, 'the eldest brother, who by custom hath been forced to give equall shares of his ancestors' land unto his younger brethren.' Roquefort gives a similar explanation. This explains the bitter satire of the text, where Richard is accused of sharing his power and wealth with dissipated courtiers, who are his paragels, i. e. like younger brothers admitted to an equal share of the realm with himself. Paragel and parageur are from O.F. parage, parentage, occurring in mod. E. dis-parage.

Reyme, v. reach after, clutch, seize, 14. 96. See note, p. 275; but the connection there suggested with Icel. hremma, Swed. rama, cannot be right. It is rather allied to O. H. G. rámén, to strive after, and the (doubtful) A.S. ráman, given in Leo's Glossar. In Wyclif's Works, ed. Matthew, p. 185, raymep perhaps means 'stretches' or 'tortures,' with reference to the false swearing then so common. In the Ancren Riwle, p. 72, l. 3, I explain reame obres by 'grasp at that of another.' See ræmen in Stratmann.

Warme, adj. warm, 20. 169 n. Warmest, adj. superl. warmest, 21.

Warmnesse, s. warmness, glow, R. 3. 288.

Warne, v. warn, a. 2. 178; Warne, 1 pr. s. 1. 107 n (p. 7); a. 10. 93; Warnede, pt. s. warned, a. 5. 30, 214; Warned, pt. s. prohibited, R. 3. 233; Warned, pt. pl. warned, R. 4. 77.

Warner, i. e. warrener, keeper of a warren, 7. 363 n, b. 5. 316. See Warinar, Warynere.

Warnyng, s. warning, 4. 431, 9. 348 n.

Warp, pt. s. spoke, uttered, a. 10. 33; Warpe, b. 5. 87, 369. From an infin. werpen, A.S. weorpan. See below.

Warpen, v. utter, speak, a. 4. 142. Warroke, v. to girth, put a girth round, fasten with a girth, 5. 21, a. 4. 19; Warrok, b. 4. 20. Cf. M.E. warlok, a fetter, in Prompt. Parv. In Wright's Vocab. i. 154, a man is directed to tear up "un warrok" of pease (i. e. as I suppose, a flexible piece of peasestalk) wherewith to fasten up bundles of beans when cut. Wright's Vocab., ed. Wülcker, col. 612, l. 23, we have: "Sirentorium, a warrok;" where possibly cinctorium is meant. In The Gent. Maga. Library (on Dialect), p. 158, there is a quotation from Blount's Tenures, p. 32, which mentions "unum stimulum ferreum pro uno warroke super quoddam clothsack," where the sense seems to be an iron peg for securing the mouth of a bag. suspect it to be allied to F. garrot, Span, garrote, and to have originally meant a strong peg used for twisting a cord tight.

Warschen, v. to heal, b. 16. 105 n.

See Warisshe.

Warth, pt. s. was, became, 6. 98.
A.S. wears, pt. t. of weersan, to become.

Waryen, v. curse, 9. 337. See Warie.

Warynere, warrener, game-keeper, 7. 363. See Warinar, Warner.

Wasshen, v. wash, b. 15. 187; Wasche, ger. 10. 80; Waschen, pp. washed, b. 13. 460; Wasshe, 11. 225; Wasschep, imp. pl. a. 6. 58. See Wesche, Wast, s. waste, extravagance, wastefulness, R. 1. 3, R. 2. 121, R. 3. 274, 364.

Wast, adj. waste, 10. 225; vain, idle, 22. 286.

Wastel, s. a cake of bread of fine flour, b. 5. 293; Wastell, 7. 341.

Waxed, pp. fastened up (lit. waxed up), a. 5. 195 n. "To wax, cerare;" Cath. Angl. See Wexed. Waxen, v. to increase, a. 8. 59; grow, become, b. 3. 300; Waxe, become, b. 11. 111; Wax, increase, b. 7. 55; Wax, 1 pt. a. waxed, became, 21. 4; pt. s. became, 7. 422, 23. 159; Waxe, pt. a. 21. 135; Waxe, pr. s. increases, a. 5. 71, a. 9. 34; Waxen, pr. pl. grow, are found, a. 11. 12; Waxen, pp. grown, increased, b. 10. 75. See Wexe. Wayke, adj. pl. weak, R. 2. 64. See Waik.

Wayn, s. wain, waggon, a. 4. 24.

Wayne, v. b. 5. 611. Perhaps an error for Wayue, q. v. In the notes (p. 151, l. 5) I inclined to the reading wayne, relying upon the entry "wayne, to raise, to lift up, to wind up, to rise, to rush, to gush, to strike; to lessen, to restrain," with 7 references, in the Glossary to the Troy-Book; but I am by no means clear that, in this book also, the right reading may not be wayue. The same remark applies to wayne in the Gloss. to the Allit. Poems, ed. Morris. The MSS. can be read either way. See wæven, waiven in Stratmann, and waff in Jamieson; and see Wayve below.

Wayten, v. watch for, 8. 187, b. 13. 393; Wayte, look after, b. 5. 202; Waytest, 2 pr. s. lookest at, regardest, 19. 275; Wayten, pr. pl. watch for, b. 8. 97, b. 13. 237; plan, a. 9. 89; watch, seek, 2. 124, 3. 78; lie in wait, a. 7. 149; Wayted, 1 pt. s. watched, examined, b. 13. 343; Wayted, pp. looked after, b. 5. 551; Waytid, pp. looked, examined, R. pr. 62; Wayte, imp. s. observe, R. 1. 82. See Waite.

Welch, adj. Welsh; as sb. Welsh cloth or stuff, i. e. flannel (or some such stuff), 7. 205; Welche, b. 5. 199; Welsche, b. 5. 199 n. See Walsche. In the notes, at p. 118, I have supposed welche to be allied to the verb walk; but I now think the right solution is certainly "Welsh material," i. e. some kind of coarse flannel; cf. the various readings Walsshe scarlet (Welsh or red flannel), wede (garment) in a. 5. 113 n. The false reading welthe arose from misreading welche, for some scribes write t and c almost exactly alike.

Wel-come, v. welcome, 21, 180; Welcometh, pr. s. b. 15, 21; Welcome, pr. pl. 8, 97.

Welcomen, adj. welcome, a. 6. 114; Welcome, 14. 60 n, b. 5. 648 n, a. 2. 208; as interj. a. 12. 62.

INDEX VII.

BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE MANUSCRIPTS; WITH PARALLEL EXTRACTS.

THE seventeenth publication of the E. E. T. S. was my edition of "Parallel Extracts from twenty-nine manuscripts of Piers Plowman," published with the view of obtaining further information about the MSS. and their contents.\(^1\) This led to further discoveries, and has enabled me to describe many more than those there noticed, and at the same time to do so more fully. I now take the opportunity of printing a more complete set of these "parallel extracts," so as to give some notion of the general appearance of the spelling, &c. of the various MSS.

Owing to the finding of new MSS, the numbers used in the former edition of parallel extracts are no longer available. Even the "roman" numerals given to the MSS, in the three Prefaces do not strictly express the correct order, when we come to compare the MSS, in the exactest manner possible. I arrange them below in such a way as to show which MSS, are most closely related to each other, but retain, for convenience, the "roman" numerals which have already been assigned to them. Many of the MSS, are also indicated, in the footnotes, by capital letters; and I now give tables, showing what the "roman" numerals and the capital letters represent. The MS, marked no. XLV (below) has not been mentioned before.

LIST OF MSS. DESCRIBED IN THE PREFACES.

Nos. I—XII and nos. XLIV, XLV belong to the A-text. Of these, nos. I—X are described in vol. i. pp. xv to xxiv; no. XI is described in vol. i. p. 142*; no. XII in vol. ii. p. vi. footnote; no. XLIV in vol. iii. p. l, and at p. 853 below; and no. XLV at p. 856.

Nos. XIII—XXVIII belong to the B-text. Of these, nos. XIII—XXVII are described in vol. ii. pp. vi to xxx; and no. XXVIII is described in vol. iii. p. xix, footnote.

Nos. XXIX—XLIII belong to the C-Text. They are described in vol. iii. pp. xix to l.

¹ This publication is now out of print, and will not be reprinted, being superseded by the information here given.

But this is only a first approximation to the real values of the MSS., and is only assumed for convenience. As a fact, some MSS. are of a mixed character. There is a set in which the former part belongs to the A-text, and the latter to the C-text; and another set in which the former part belongs to the C-text, and the latter part to the B-text. We thus get a more exact classification, as follows:

A-text. Nos. I. II. IV. VI. VII. VIII. IX. XI. XII. XLV. (Ten.)

B-text. Nos. XIII. XIV. XV. XV. (i. e. the lost MS. printed by Crowley) XVI. XVII. XVIII. XIX. XX. XXI. XXII. XXVI. XXVII. XXVIII. (Fourteen.)

Nos. XXIX. XXX. XXXI. XXXII. XXXIII. XXXIV. XXXV. XXXVI. XXXVII. XXXVIII. XXXIX. XL. XLI. XLII. XLIII. (Fifteen.)

Mixed text; A and C. Nos. III. V. X. XLIV. (Four.) Mixed text; C and B. Nos. XXIII. XXIV. XXV. (Three.)

LETTERS DENOTING VARIOUS MSS.

Some of the above MSS. are denoted in the footnotes and elsewhere by letters. In the A-text, the letters employed are V, H, T, U and U,³ H₂, D, and A. They denote the first seven MSS. (I to VII) in the above list, and are chosen as representing the words Vernon, Harley, Trinity, University, Harley, Douce, and Ashmole.

In the B-text, the letters employed are L, R, W, Y, O, C2, C, and B. They denote MSS. XIII—XVI, XVIII, XIX, XXII, and XXIII in the above list, and are chosen as representing the words Laud, Rawlinson, Wright, 4 Yates-Thompson, Oriel, Cambridge (no. 2), Cambridge, and Bodley.

In the C-text, the letters employed are P, E, Z, I and I, M, F, S, G, and K. (Also B and T, which, as being mixed texts, have been already mentioned.) These letters denote MSS. XXIX—XXXVII in the above list. Most of them can be remembered by connecting them with the word they are meant to symbolise; but a few are arbitrarily chosen. Thus P, I, M, K represent, respectively, Phillipps, Ilchester, Museum, Kenelm-Digby. F represents MS. Ff. 5. 35 (Camb. Univ. Library). S is the last letter of Corpus. Only E (= Laud 656), Z (= Bodley 851), and G (= Camb. Univ. Dd. 3. 13) have no symbolic meaning. I had intended to use N to denote MS. Harl. 2376, but it was not worth collating.

The above letters, when arranged in alphabetical order, are as

[The foot-note to Text A, p. 31, ll. 71, 72, is wrong.]

Text A; sub-class b. The only copy which contains the whole of Passus xii, and from which that Passus is therefore printed.

XI. MS. Rawl. Poet. 137; described at p. 142* of A-text. Many of its readings resemble those of MS. IV; and it retains the passage x. 205—xi. 47, which is wanting in that MS.

"Meyrys and maysteres : 2e bat beb mene	•

Text A; sub-class b. Not collated.

XII. MS. Dublin D. 4. 12; described in a footnote in Pref. B. p. vi, as it was not at first discovered to be of the A-text. Imperfect, ending at vii. 45. Some of the text is transposed, nearly as in MSS. XI and IV. Closely resembles MSS. XI and IV, particularly the former; but is much corrupted in places, whilst the dialect has been turned into Northumbrian.

"Mayres & mercers þat er þe menes

Text A; sub-class b. Collated; and denoted in the footnotes by U. A fragment of a different A-text (Pass. ii. 1—23) also occurs in this MS., and is denoted in the footnotes by U.

IV. MS. no. 45 in Univ. Coll. Oxford; described in Pref. A. p. xx. Some of the text is transposed, just as in MS. XI. It is also remarkable as containing a few lines of the beginning of Pass. xii, the whole of which occurs in MS. XI only.

"Meires & macerys · þei þat ben mene

Text A; sub-class b(!). Not collated, except (recently) throughout Passus xii. 1—83.

¹ I. e. "Therefore poor people sorely a-buy (pay for) their part." Abyzze = abyzz, the Northern form of a-buy, i. e. buy back, redeem, pay for. But this reading is quite corrupt.

XLV. MS. in the possession of Sir Henry Ingilby, of Ripley Castle, Yorkshire. This MS. is remarkable as containing a large portion of Passus xii, the whole of which is found in MS. Rawl. Poet. 137 only. For a fuller description, see p. 856 below.

"Meyres & macers · 3e þat bene mene Be-twyxen þe kyng & þe comen · to kepyn þe lawes As to puneschyn on pyloryes · & on pynyng stoles Bruers & bakers · bochers & kokes	68

Mixed text: partly Text A; sub-class c. Used to form the Text in xi. 181—303. Collated, and denoted in the footnotes by T. Contains also a portion of the C-text; viz. xii. 297 to the end. III. MS. Trin. Coll. Cam. R. 3. 14; described in Pref. A.

p. xviii. Apparently the oldest MS. of this (the largest) sub-class.

V. MS. Harl. 6041; described in Pref. A. p. xx. It is remarkably like MS. III (above), but certainly of later date.

"Meyres and maystres / hij bat ben menene dwellyn

VI. MS. Douce 323, in the Bodleian Library; described in Pref. A. p. xxi. An inferior copy, and full of blunders. Contains Prologue and Pass. i—xi.

I had intended to observe, in describing the MS., that some of the matter in it is transposed. Thus, in Pass. iii, the order is thus: lines 1-79, 143-167, 80-127 (128-142 omitted), 143-end.

61	'Meyres & Maystres · þey þat ben mene

VII. MS. Ashmole 1468, in the Bodleian Library; described in Pref. A. p. xxi. Quoted a few times, when it is denoted by A. Imperfect at the beginning; begins at i. 142, and ends with Pass. xi. In some readings it agrees with MS. IX.

"Meyris & maceris: þat ben þece menis

VIII. MS. No. 150 in Lincoln's Inn; described in Pref. A. p. xxii. Contains Prologue and Pass. i—viii only. The readings frequently agree with those of MS. III, but many corruptions have been introduced by the scribe's excessive love of alliteration. Perhaps some of it may have been written out from memory, and half-lines supplied from the scribe's own head; as only thus can we account for such a version of A. v. 161—164 as the following:—

"Hykke þe hakeneyman · þat coude wel heue þe coppe, Clarice of kockeslane · þat klatre can faste, Dawe þer was & dolfyn · & a doseyn othir."

The following extract was kindly made for me by Mr. Furnivall.

"Meires & macers 2e þat beon mad mene

A-text, amplified; sub-class d. Not collated.

IX. MS. Harl. 3954, in the British Museum; described in Pref. A. p. xxiii. Contains the "council of the rats," belonging to the Prologue of the B-text, and other amplifications. But it ends with Pass. xi. Several passages appear to have been corrupted.

"Meyres & macers ' þat meene ben be-twen

Apparently written borgates. The "b" is written like "y."

Mixed Text: partly A-text, amplified; sub-class d. Not collated.

X. MS. Digby 145, in the Bodleian Library, described in Pref.
A. p. xxiv. This is an amplification of the A-text, as it contains the "council of the rats," belonging to the Prologue of the B-text. In this respect it resembles the preceding. It also contains a portion of Text C, viz. from xii. 297 to the end, in which respect it resembles MSS. III and V. It is a poor copy.

Text B; sub-class a. MS. adopted as the basis of the text, and denoted in the footnotes by L.

XIII. MS. Laud Misc. 581 (Oxford); described in Pref. B. p. vi. The best copy of the B-text, carefully corrected. I still adhere to my opinion that it may indeed be the author's autograph copy.

"¶ Meires and maceres · that menes ben bitwene

Text B; sub-class a (1). Not collated.

XVII. MS. Ashburnham CXXIX; described in Pref. B. p. xv. This MS. agrees closely (as far as I have observed it) with the B-text as printed from MS. XIII. It retains the passage (B. xvi. 56—91) which MS. XXII and others omit. It has plurals in -us occasionally, and sometimes the verbal-endings -un and -ud for -en and -ed.

"Meires and macers · bat menes be bitwene	76

XIV. MS. Rawl. Poet. 38, in the Bodleian Library; described in Pref. B. p. xi. Four leaves of this MS. are in MS. Lansdowne

Text B; sub-class b. Partly collated, and denoted by Y.

XVI. MS. in the possession of H. Yates Thompson, Esq., of Liverpool; described in Pref. B. p. xiv. A fair text, the spelling of which resembles the printed text, but it has a few various readings, in which it resembles those of the same sub-class.

"	Maires and maceres · that menes ben bitwene The kyng & the comune · to kepe the lawes	76

XXI. MS. Camb. Univ. Lib. Gg. 4. 31; described in Pref. B. p. xxiii. A late and sometimes faulty copy from a fair text, which has many readings in common with the preceding.

XXII. MS. Camb. Univ. Lib. Dd. 1. 17; described in Pref. B. p. xxiii. Remarkable for its omission of the passage in B. xvi. 56—91; for some other omissions, for additions of a few lines of doubtful authority, and for the frequent occurrence in it of Northern forms. See e. g. worches in 1. 80 below.

"Maires and maceres · that menes ben bitwene The kyng and be comune · to kepe the lawes	76

Mixed Text: part of Text B, sub-class b, imperfect; together with part of Text C. See footnotes marked B both in B-text and C-text, and some of the Critical Notes, B. pp. 391—395.

XXIII. MS. Bodley 814; described in Pref. B. p. xxv; cf. Critical Note on B. ii. 121, p. 391. Remarkable for its omission of the passage in B. xvi. 56—91; for the mixture of C-text (Passus i, Pass. ii and part of Pass. iii) with B-text (part of Pass. ii and Pass. iii—xx); and for numerous corrupt readings.

"Maires and maceris · þat menes ben bitwene	76

Mixed Text: part of Text B, sub-class b, imperfect; together with part of Text C. Not actually collated, yet practically represented by the footnotes marked B both in B-text and C-text.

XXIV. MS. Additional 10574; described in Pref. B. p. xxvi. This is little else than a mere duplicate of the preceding, and written by the same scribe. The note in Mr. Wright's edition, Introd. p. xxxvii (note 24), as to the identity of this MS. with that used by Dr. Whitaker, is erroneous; see Pref. C. Observe how closely this extract agrees with the preceding, especially in the odd spelling bieggen in 1.83, and in the false reading bi pe in 1.86.

"Maires and maceris · þat menes ben bitwene

XXV. MS. Cotton, Caligula A. xi (B. M.); described in Pref. B. p. xxvii. Apparently a copy of one of the two preceding, with both of which it very closely agrees. In the readings brewsteris (l. 79) and her (l. 84) it follows MS. XXIII, not MS. XXIV.

"Meires and maceris 'that menys ben bytwen . 76

XVIII. MS. Oriel LXXIX; described in Pref. B. p. xvi. A neat and good copy, of which four leaves have been unfortunately lost, so that the passages in xvii. 96—340, and xix. 276—355 are wanting.

Text B; sub-class c. Collated wherever the Oriel MS. fails, and denoted by C2. See also vol. ii, p. 421. XIX. MS. Ll. 4. 14 in the Cambridge University Library. Apparently copied from the Oriel MS. when perfect, thus preserving the passages which are wanting in that MS. Comparison of the two copies at once shows many similarities in the spelling.

XV.* MS. first printed by Robert Crowley A.D. 1550; now lost. See Pref. B. p. xxxi; and p. xiv, footnote 2. The extract is here given as it stands in Crowley's first edition.

> From 'The Vision of Pierce Plowman, now fyrste imprynted by Roberte Crowley, 1505 [1550].

"Maires and Maceris that meanes be betwene	76
The Kynge and the comon to kepe the lawes
To punnyshen on pyleries and pynning stoles
Brusterrs and bakesters, bochers and cokes

With y' the pore people should put in here wombes	81
For toke they all trulie they tymbred not so high Ne bought no burgages be they full certen."

The following variations occur in the second impression, also dated 1550. 76. Mayres and masters. 77. common. 78. punnyshe, pylaries, pynnynge. 79. Brusters, bouchers. 81. percell meale. 82. poysen, prively, oft. 83. through regratry, rentes. 84. her. 85. truely, timbred, hygh. 86. be ye.

The third impression, also dated 1550, has all these variations, except that it has punyshe (with one n) in 1.78; moreover, it has byghen in 1.83. The edition printed by Owen Rogers in 1561 has all the variations of the above third impression, and these following additional ones. 81. poore. 84. shoulds. 85. truly.

Text B; sub-class d. A mere transcript (not quite an exact one) of Rogers's edition of 1561, and therefore a more corrupt copy of the foregoing.

XXVII. MS. No. 201 in Caius College, Cambridge; described in Pref. B. p. xxx. Of no value.

"Mayres and maisters that meanes be betwene

Text B; sub-class d. Collated throughout; see footnotes marked W. XV. MS. Trin. Coll. Camb. B. 15. 17; described in Pref. B. p. xiii. Printed in extenso by Mr. Wright. A remarkably good MS.

XX. MS. Ashburnham CXXX; described in Preface B. p. xxi.

A faulty copy, with attempted "corrections," which seem to be taken from Crowley's printed edition. It contains also a fragment of Piers the Plowman, viz. B. ii. 208—iii. 72, which is quite distinct (and different) from the complete copy.

XXVI. MS. Corpus Christi Coll. (Oxford) CCI; described in Pref. B. p. xxvii. Contains several additional lines, which are often spurious. The manner of division of the poem into Passus is wholly different from that of every other MS.

XXVIII. MS. Phillipps 8252; described in Pref. C. p. xix; as it was not at first perceived to belong to the B-type. In fact, it is a mixed text, being chiefly of the B-type, with a few additions from the C-text, made in quite a different way to those which appear in MS. Rawl. 38. This is well shown by the description of "Wrath" printed by Dr. Whitaker; see my remarks. It is much corrupted, and of little value.

XXXI. MS. Bodley 851; described in Pref. C. p. xxx. A remarkable MS., agreeing very closely (in the latter part) with the printed text. But the former part, which approaches the B-type, is corrupt and valueless. The C-text begins with Pass. xi.

DESCRIPTIONS OF MSS. XLIV AND XLV.

XLIV. In the Preface to the C-text, p. l, I explained that this MS. was not accessible at the time of writing the descriptions of the MSS. I have lately applied again to the Duke of Westminster, who has most courteously allowed me the full use of the MS., so that I am now enabled to describe it accurately, as well as to give the extract printed above.

There are three vellum fly-leaves at the beginning and end, but these form no part of the original MS.; on one of them is written

"Richard Grosvenor," in a hand of the seventeenth century.

The MS. itself is neatly written on parchment, in a handwriting of (as I suppose) the former half of the fifteenth century. It consists of 9 quires of 8 leaves each, followed by a quire of 6 leaves; thus the whole number of leaves is 78. The size of each page is 11 inches by 7½ inches, and the usual number of lines in a page is 41. The poem ends on the front of leaf 76, and is succeeded by 7 lines in alliterative verse in a later hand, of no value. At the end is the colophon—Explicit tractatus uiri¹ piers plowman nominatus. Leaves 77 and 78 are blank, as well as the back of leaf 76. The text, like that of MS. T, is not all of one type, but has been made up from two others. The former part is of the A-type, which ends on fol. 31a with the line (A. xi. 303)—

Wib-oute penance at here partyng · in-to be hie blysse.

The Latin quotation breuis oratio penetrat celum is wanting, though there is just room for one more line on the page. On turning over the leaf we find the line (C. xiii. 1)—

Allas I say quod olde (sic) and holynesse bobe.

The former part of the MS. tends to agreement with MSS. T and D, but the text is somewhat disappointing, with numerous variations and corruptions. Yet the copy must have been made (ultimately at least) from an excellent original, and many of the readings are of considerable interest, at any rate to myself. The very peculiarities of the MS. give it a special value. The scribe sometimes omits lines, amongst which I may notice A. i. 5 (and part of 6), A. i. 168, A. iii. 262, 263, A. v. 96, 163, 167, 197, A. vi. 31, A. vii. 96, 125, 227, 228, 282—284, 286, A. viii. 105, 106, A. ix. 12, A. x. 64, 67, 81, 82, 117, 186, 210; besides the lines which are marked in the footnotes as existing "in H only." But he also inserts lines, most of which really belong to the B-text. Thus, in place of A. i. 112, he gives us B. i. 113—116; after A. i. 129, he inserts B. i. 139 (and Latin) and 140; after A. ii. 68, he inserts B. ii. 79—82, 84, 87, 93—95, 99, 100; in place of A. ii. 93, he gives us B. ii. 124; in place of A. iv. 100—108, he gives us B. iv. 113—125; after A. iv. 145, he inserts B. iv. 165—170; after A. v. 33, he inserts B. v. 36—41; after A. v. 39, we get B. v. 49—56; after A. v. 42, we get B. v. 60; after A. v. 69, we get B. v. 84—93; and so on. What is still more extraordinary, is the occasional introduction of lines of the C-type; thus, after A. ii. 20, we find the insertion of two lines answering to C. iii. 28, 29; and after A. ii. 143, we find C. iii. 185—188. These insertions are the more remarkable because they do not occur in MS. T, to which the MS. here described bears a tolerably close general resemblance. The scribe has made a singular mistake at the beginning of Passus VII, which commences thus:—

Cesseb now quod be kyng · I suffre yow no lengere.

This is the first line of Passus IV, wrongly repeated, as if he was going to rewrite a portion of his task. But he at once discovered the error, and proceeds with A. vii. 1 at once, as if nothing had happened. The most noteworthy variation occurs at A. xi. 163, where the scribe makes Passus XI come to an end, and inserts a new rubric; thus:—

Tercius passus de dowel.

I went wightly my way 'wip-oute more lettyng; &c.

In some instances the scribe has inferior readings which impair the alliteration; in others, he supports many of the emendations which I have already made in the text. It would be tedious to give further details about the various readings; I will therefore merely cite a few specimens. In A. prol. 34, this MS. has gylously (for giltles); in A. i. 10, the latter half of the line is—so faire was here lyre¹; in A. v. 14, the latter half of the line is—pat so loude blew²; in A. v. 67, the former half of the line is—Al forbolne³ for angre; A. v. 88 runs thus—after pat I crie as cof⁴ pat god gyf hem sorwe; A. v. 166 ends with—and kitte pe kempstere⁵; A. v. 242 begins with—Robyn⁶ pe robbour. A. vi. begins with—3it were pere fewe men ' be way beder coupe, But blostred forb as bestes ' brogh baches' and hilles.

At the end of Passus VIII there is a rubric of some importance, viz. Sequitur prologue de dowel, dobett, et dobest. This shows that Passus

1 lyre = lere, hue, mien.

This loses the mark of the date of the poem.

* forbolne == forbollen, greatly swollen; from Icel. bolginn, swollen, with the intensive prefix for-; a forcible and rare word.

* kempstere = kembstere, a woman who combs wool; see Prompt. Parv.; nowhere else in our poem.

6 Seems like an allusion to Robin Hood; so again in A. vii. 66.

⁷ For progh read over; but baches is the right reading. See C. viii. 159.

IX (A) is really a new Prologue, and accounts for the counting of Passus X as Passus primus de dowel.

Of the latter part of the MS. it may suffice to say that many of its readings agree with those of S and G, sometimes with those of T, M, or F; it almost invariably differs from P and E, wherever these differ from the rest. A few lines are occasionally omitted in this portion also, viz. C. xiii. 3, 94, 105—107, 206; xiv. 45, 82, 242; xv. 18, 19, 63, 78, 122, 145; xvi. (part of) 111 and 112, 126, 210, 259, 263, 280, 281, 285, 288, 289, 303; xvii. 129, 264, 267; xviii. 116, 164, 178—180, 283, 290; xix. 159; xx. 69; xxi. 100, 255; &c. Some of these lines are omitted in other MSS., as has been already noted. The most important omission is on the back of leaf 35, where there is a gap of 66 lines (C. xiv. 110—175 inclusive) just before the fifth line from the bottom of the page. This affords positive proof that the latter part of this MS. was copied from an older one which had lost a leaf here, each page of which contained 33 lines (a common number). I note a few curious readings.

We find Vpholsters, C. xiii. 218; and chynchen¹ but pei geten, xiii. 227 (latter half); I se wymmen misdo in werk and in speche bothe,² xiv. 190; or pe licour in his coppe, xv. 185 (latter half); bodyngs³ (for poddynges), xvi. 66; twynkeled⁴ (for preynte), xvi. 121; Ne citalon⁵ ne gitaron⁵ ne synge wip pe crowpe,² xvi. 208; Odibile bonum (instead of Distinctio paupertatis), xvii. 121; and here tailend⁵ als, xvii. 258 (latter half); shoris⁵ (for shoriers), xix. 20, 25; sondrylopes¹⁰ (for surlepes), xix. 193; smother,¹¹ smoper (for smorpre), xx. 305, 323; antrous,¹² xxi. 14; teyned¹³ (for tenden), xxi. 250; patred¹⁴ (for parled), xxi. 281; astaroth¹⁵ (for astrot), xxi. 289; deceyuedest¹⁶ (for troiledest), xxi. 321; ytrolled (for troiled),¹² xxi.

² A very remarkable and unfair variation.

⁸ I. e. puddings; F. bouding.

4 I. e. winked; see Prompt. Parv.

- ⁵ Play on the cittern; a rare verb, occurring nowhere else in our poem.
- ⁶ Play on the gittern (the same instrument); a rare verb.
- Fiddle; a Welsh word; nowhere else in our poem.
- ⁸ I. e. marking on a tally, reckoning; see the Glossary.

9 Mod. E. shores, i. e. props.

- 10 For sundrileges, with the same force as surleges = serleges; a rare form.
 - 11 This gives the etymology of smother, which stands for smorther.
 - 13 Showing that auntrous is the right reading.
 - 13 A strange form.
 - 14 See Pierce the Ploughman's Crede, l. 4.
 - 15 Hence astrot really means Ashtaroth.
 - 16 A gloss upon troiledest.
 - 17 Cf. B. xviii. 296.

The following lines are curious.

And pan frayned I at a byrde · as he sat in his nest,¹
To knowe dowel, quod pat byrde · and who it is, he saide
(xiv. 220, 221).

After C. xv. 194, the following five lines are inserted (as in S):—

Iob was a panym · & plesed atte best, And Aristotle also · sewed þe same sect, And ladde ful holy lyf · aftre þe lawe of kynde; Wherfor it semeth soþly · sondre sotels to shewe That he was saued so was Iob · I can not say þe soþe.

These lines can hardly be genuine; they seem to be due to imperfect reminiscence of C. xiv. 15, xii. 216-220.

XLV. A MS. in the possession of Sir Henry Ingilby, of Ripley Castle, Yorkshire. I am much indebted to Sir Henry Ingilby for kindly allowing me to inspect this MS. carefully, thus enabling me to give the extract printed above, and the very remarkable passage which I give in full below.

The date of the MS. can hardly be earlier than the middle of the fifteenth century, and there can be little doubt (I am informed) that it once belonged to a collection of MSS. in Fountains Abbey. It contains other pieces besides Piers Plowman.

1. per woned a berne in babeloyne in pat burgh riche: ends—Of pe prophete. 4½ pages. This is the piece commonly called the 'Pistyl of Sweet Susan;' see the Select Remains of Scottish Poetry, ed. D. Laing, 1822.

2. In ilke synful man or woman pat is bounden in dedly synne.2

3. A treatise on the Active and Contemplative Life. (Probably by Hampole, as printed in English Prose Treatises of Richard Rolle de Hampole, ed. G. G. Perry, E. E. T. S., 1866.) The pieces 2 and 3 occupy about 21 pages.

4. Piers Plowman; begins—In a summer sesyn whanne softe was be sunne. This copy, which appears to be imperfect in the middle, clearly belongs to the A-text; and, as far as I can judge without a very close examination, belongs to sub-class b, possessing several points of similarity with MS. U and with MS. Rawl. Poet. 137. It contains one passage of much value, viz. a large portion of Passus XII, which I give at length below, on account of the great rarity of copies of this Passus. Hitherto, I have only found one complete copy, viz. that in MS. Rawl. Poet. 137, already printed (A-text, pp. 137*—141*). MS. U contains the first 19 lines, already collated. The Ingilby MS. contains 87 lines, answering to the first 83 lines of the Rawlinson MS.; it omits one of these (l. 55), but, on the other hand, has five new lines, which are unique, not being extant in any other copy. At the first glance,

¹ nest is due to misunderstanding nuste, i. e. knew not. Hence the scribe had to alter both lines, without obtaining much sense after all.

I had hopes of recovering a new copy of the whole of this rare twelfth Passus, and was particularly anxious to see the exact point at which the Passus was completed; it was somewhat disappointing to find that just the last few lines, the most important, are wanting. It is clear that the scribe had an imperfect copy before him. He did his best, writing the last line upon a new page; but he evidently had no more to copy from, and had to leave the rest of the page blank. We want just 17 lines more, but they are not to be had from this source. It is, however, a considerable gain that he has given us so much; for we are now assured that this "Passus Tereius de Dowel" was the Passus with which the A-text originally concluded. As every scrap of information about this Passus is important from its rarity, I here give it as it stands in this MS.

LIST OF FIRST LINES OF THE PASSUS.

Since Passus of the Poem are often not numbered in the MSS., or else, perhaps, so numbered as not to adhere to the same system throughout, the following list of first lines is added, as likely to be of great use to the reader of a MS. in finding his place. It will be noticed that those of the Vernon type (A-text) divide Passus V. of the Crowley type (B-text) into two Passus; whilst Passus VI. of the Whitaker type (C-text) begins with 108 lines which are peculiar to MSS. of that type.

A. Passus of the Vernon MS.

- Prol. In A somer sesun whon softe was be sonne.
 - I. What his Mountein be-Meneh and his derke Dale.
 - II. Yit kneled I on my knees and cried hire of grace.

 - MS. H alone prefixes two lines to the line here quoted, vis.

Now riden his folk * & walken on fote To seche hat seint * in selcouhe londia.

² Not in the Vernon MS.; found in MS. Rawl. Poet. 137. Some MSS., instead of this Passus, actually have Pass. XIII—XXIII of the C-text. See vol. i. p. xviii., and p. 857 above.

B. Passus of the Crowley Type of MSS. (MS. Laud 581.)

- Prol. In a somer seson whan soft was the sonne.

NOTICES OF PIERS PLOWMAN BY VARIOUS AUTHORS.

THE following list of references, &c. to Piers Plowman can hardly be exhaustive; but may serve to indicate the fact that the work, though seldom well known, was at no time quite forgotten. I suspect that many of those who referred to it knew but little of the matter.

- 1. 'Peres Plouman' and others are mentioned in a letter written by John Balle, in 1381. See it quoted in the General Preface to this work.
- 2. That CHAUCER was acquainted with William's great poem, can hardly be doubted. His description of the Plowman as being brother to the Persone, a true and good worker, living in peace and perfect charity, a sincere lover both of God and his neighbour, and ready to help his neighbour without hire, is (as I understand it) a hearty and graceful: recognition of the merits of his brother poet; and it was written at a time when William's work was already widely known. I have already protested against that blundering criticism which has turned Chaucer's goodhumoured allusion to alliterative poetry into an ill-natured sneer. It is not Chaucer, but Chaucer's Parson, who says he is a Southern man, and has therefore little skill in rom, ram, ruf; and who, in the very next breath, tells us that rime (such as Chaucer's) is "but little better" than alliteration. Whence he justly concludes that he must speak in proce. It is remarkable that Chaucer's line (Prol. 536)—"He wolde thresshe, and therto dyke and delue" is parallel to a certain passage in the B-text only, vis. B. v. 552, 553. The A-text has only "I-diket and I-doluen," but no reference to thrashing, whilst the C-text has no reference either to diking, delving, or thrashing. All three texts have the verb swynke (C. viii. 186); Chaucer has the sb. swynk (Prol. 540), and swynkere 9 lines above. Chaucer's statements that the Ploughman "hadde I-lad of dong ful mony a fother," and that he "rood vpon a mare" are very exact. The Ploughman possessed just one "cart-mare" (C. ix. 312), which he employed, as he tells us, "to drawe a-feld my donge the whyle drouthe lasteth." Compare also Chaucer's lines with P. Pl. B. xix. 432-436.
- 3. Pierce the Ploughman's Crede. A Poem in alliterative verse, written about A.D. 1394. Printed by Wolfe in 1553; by Owen Rogers, in 1561; by Whitaker, in 1814; by T. Wright, in 1842 and 1856; and by myself, for the E. E. T. S., in 1867.
- 4. The Plowman's Tale, or the Complaint of the Ploughman; written about 1395 by the author of the foregoing. Printed in the black-letter editions of Chaucer, in 1542 and later; and in Wright's Political Poems, i. 304.

Chaucer's Man of Lawes Tale, &c.; ed. Skeat, notes to Group I, l. 43.

- 5. The Praier and Complaynte of the Ploweman unto Christe; written not long after the Yere of oure Lorde, a thousand and thre hundred. [For which read, a thousand and four hundred.] Printed, with a Preface dated 1531, as a separate tract. Reprinted without the Preface (which Fox attributes to Tyndale) in Fox's Acts and Monuments, ed. 1610, i. 366; ed. 1684, i. 453; also in ed. 1641. Again reprinted, with the Preface, in the Harleian Miscellany, vol. vi. A tract in prose, attacking various abuses of the church. It bears hardly any resemblance to the Vision.
- 6. LYDGATE was certainly acquainted with our author. In his London Lickpenny, st. 4, he tells us how he applied to a lawyer, "one with a sylken hode," for assistance; but, having no money, says he—"I gat not a mum of his mouth for my meed." Cf. P. Pl. C. i. 159—164. In st. 8 of the same, he has a passage resembling P. Pl. C. i. 226—230. I have not made further search, for more examples, through Dan John's voluminous effusions.
- 7. 1431. In the Will of John Wyndhill, rector of Arncliffe in Craven, is a bequest to John Kendale of "unum librum Anglicanum de Pers Plughman"; Testamenta Eboracensia, ii. 34 (Surtees Soc.). Also in the Will of Thos. Roos, in the Commissary Court of London, 1433, there is a bequest of "librum vocatum piers plowman." See Fifty Earliest Eng. Wills, ed. Furnivall, Additions, p. 2.
- 8. God Spede the Plough. A poem of 96 lines, in MS. Lansdowne 762, fol. 5; printed in my edition of Pierce the Ploughman's Crede, p. 69. Written about 1500.
- 9. A lytell Geste howe the Plowman lerned his Pater Noster. A short piece in verse, printed by Wynkyn de Worde; reprinted in Hazlitt's Early Popular Poetry, vol. i.
 - 10. "I saw Raf Coilgear with his thrawin brow And Piers Plewman, that maid his workmen fow." 1 (1501.) G. Douglas, Palice of Honour, pt. iii; ed. Small, vol. i. p. 65, l. 6.

Douglas certainly had some acquaintance with our poem, at that time still unprinted; see Mr. Small's edition, vol. i. pp. cxliii., cxliii., 142, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151.

11. At various dates, chiefly from about 1508 to 1523, appeared numerous poems by John Skelton. He must certainly have seen a MS. of Piers Plowman, as appears from several expressions which he employs. I refer the reader to Dyce's edition (1843). We there find mention of Favel² (i. 36); Harvy³ as the name of a deceifful person (i. 39); the portrait of Disdain (i. 41), which corresponds to William's portrait of Envy⁴ rather than to his portrait of Wrath; the portrait of Riot (i. 43, 44), which corresponds to William's portrait of Wrath; the curious expression—the deuylles date⁶ (i. 44, 47); the long description of Envy, notwithstanding the similar description in Ovid, Metam. ii. 775 (i. 78, 79); the general tone of the poem of Elynour Rummynge (i. 95), which reminds us of William's portrait of Gluttony; the remarkable allusion to mayden Meed² (i. 160); the use of the extremely rare word recrayed³ (i. 189); the description of Largesse (i. 234), who is merely Maiden Meed under another name; the description of Clokyd Colusyon (i. 248), who is merely Envy redescribed. There are other small points that might be noted, but which are less sure. But I think there is quite enough to prove, not merely that he had seen a MS. of Piers Plowman, but that the MS. was one of the B-text. Thus, he says "he bote the lyppe" (i. 41), as in A. v. 67, B. v. 85, whereas in C. vii. 104 the expression is "nyppyng hus lyppes;" and again, he describes Riot or Wrath, there being no description of Wrath in the A-text. We can go even further, and observe that his reading was principally directed towards the earlier part of the poem, ending with Passus V.

12. Piers Plowman; a tract in prose and verse; with the title:—

I playne Piers, which cannot flatter, A Plowe-man, Men me call; My Speeche is fowlle, yet marke the matter, How thynges may hap to fall.

It ends on the reverse of the 44th leaf with the words:—
God save the kynge and speede the plans

God save the kynge and speede the ploughe, And sende the prelates care ynoughe.

Mr. Heber suggests that it was written by Wm. Roy, who wrote 'Rede me and be not wroth' in 1528. See J. P. Collier, Bibliographical and Critical Account, &c., 1865, ii. 166.

13. "The Banckett of Iohan the Reve. Vnto peirs ploughman. Laurens laborer. Thomlyn Tailyor. And hobb of the hills. with other;" &c.

[1532] MS. Harl. 207; quoted in the Percy Folio MS., ed. Hales and Furnivall, vol. ii. p. lxi; q. v.

- 14. Pyers Plowmans Exortation vnto the Lordes, Knightes, and Burgoysses of the Parlyament House. Printed by Anthony Scholoker, in the reign of K. Edward VI. [1547—1553.] A copy is in the 'Royal library' in the British Museum.
- 15. A goodlye Dialogue and Dysputacion between Pyers Ploweman and a Popish Preest, concernynge the Supper of the Lorde. 8vo. No date. [1548?]
- 16. In 1550, ROBERT CROWLEY printed three impressions of the poem, from a good MS. (of the B-type) which is no longer extant. See Crowley's preface, as reprinted here in vol. ii. pp. xxxii—xxxiv. Various readings from Crowley's edition are given in vol. ii. pp. 387—420. I do not observe much in Crowley's Select Works (E. E. T. S. 1872) that shows William's influence upon him, yet he caught up the trick of alliteration. Thus in Crowley, p. 24, l. 641, we find "Salamon the sage in Sapience doeth saye," copied almost verbatim from P. Pl. B. x. 379.

- 17. Bp. Ridley speaks with disapprobation of men who altered the archaic forms of our old authors; it is not obvious to what he alludes, unless he thought that Crowley's text was somewhat modernised. He says—"haud magnam apud me gratiam inierunt qui Petrum Aratorem, Gowerum, et Chaucerum, et similis farinse homines, in hanc turpiter mixtam linguam, neque vero Anglicam, neque pure Gallicam, transtulerunt." (Ab. 1555.) N. Ridley, Works; Parker Soc., p. 490. (The note at p. 494, saying that the reference is to The Plowman's Complaint, is incorrect.)
- 18. In 1558, in the Inventory of Rich. Brereton, Esq. of Ley, there is a notice of a copy of "Pyers Ploghman" in the "Librarye," valued at 6d.; and of another copy at 8d. See Lancashire Wills and Inventories, Chetham Society, vol. i. pp. 174, 175. (These may have been copies of Crowley's edition of 1550.)
- 19. In 1559, John Bale has a passage concerning our author, which I have given in full in the Preface to the A-text, p. xxxiv. He has also left us a MS. note, for which see the same, p. xxxv.

- 21. In "Six Ballads with Burdens," from MSS. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, edited by J. Goodwin for the Percy Society in 1844, p. 6, there is reference to Saywell and Dowel. These words are clearly borrowed from our Poem, B. ix. 1, 20.

(1579). Spenser; Epilogue to The Shepheards Calender.

Spenser does not show any very close acquaintance with "Piers Plowman," but probably alludes to his own Eclogues for May, July, and September, in which he treats of the evils caused in the church by unworthy pastors. In the first of these, he actually introduces Piers by name, as the representative of the Protestant pastor. In the Faerie Queene, we have a description of the Seven Deadly Sins (b. i. c. 4), and the statement that the Red Cross Knight was brought up "in ploughman's state to bide" (b. i. c. 10. st. 66).

- 27. "Newes from the North. Otherwise called the Conference between Simon Certain and Pierce Plowman. Faithfully collected and gathered by T. F. Student. Aut bibe, aut abi. Printed at London... by Edward Allde. 1585." This is the title of a black-letter book in 4to, of 44 leaves; described in Collier's Bibl. Catalogue, ii. 25. Mr. Furnivall notes that Collier cannot be right in attributing it to Francis Thynne. According to Ames, an earlier edition was printed by John Allde in 1579.

Webbe in 1586, we read:—"The next [after Lydgate!] of our auncient Poets, that I can tell of, I suppose to be Pierce Ploughman, who in hys dooinges is somewhat haushe and obscure, but indeede a very pithy wryter, and (to hys commendation I speake it) was the first that I haue seene, that observed ye quantity of our verse without the curiosity of Ryme." See the reprint in Ancient Critical Essays, ed. J. Haslewood, ii. 33.
- 31. "Neither shal I therfore neede to ransacke Pierce Plowmans satchell, nor to descant vpon fortunes newly collected out of the old Shepherds Kalender: nor to tell you of a day when a Bush in Essex shall be worth a Castell in Kent (which percase was fulfilled many hundred yeeres ago)." 1588. but loose meetre, and his termes hard and obscure, so as in them is little pleasure to be taken." (1589). G. PUTTENHAM; The Arte of English Poesie; b. i. c. 31. It may be remarked that the writers of the sixteenth century seem to have found more difficulty in the language of the four-teenth century than we find now. Puttenham probably found Chaucer nearly as "hard and obscure" as he did "Piers Plowman," for he afterwards says—"Our maker [poet] therfore at these dayes shall not follow Piers Plowman nor Gower nor Lydgate nor yet Chaucer, for their language is now out of vse with vs;" b. iii. c. 4. Elsewhere he mentions, as writers of satire, "Lucilius, Iuuenall and Persius among the Latines, and with vs he that wrote the booke called Piers plowman;" b. i. c. 11.

- 33. In "A Merry Knack to Know a Knave," a Comedy, printed in 1594, Piers Plowman is one of the characters. He is represented as presenting a petition to the King, against the oppressions of a wealthy farmer. See Dodsley's Old Plays, ed. Hazlitt, vi. 559, 560.
- 34. In A Comparative Discourse of our English Poets, &c., written by F. MERES, and first printed in 1598, we read that "Piers Plowman was the first that observed the true quantity of our verse without the curiositie of Rime;" and that, in English Satire, the chief writers are "Piers Plowman, Lodge, Hall of Imanuel Colledge in Cambridge," &c. See the reprint in Ancient Critical Essays upon English Poets, by J. Haslewood, 1815, vol. ii. pp. 149, 154.

- 37. MICHAEL DRAYTON paraphrased a considerable portion of the last Passus of Piers the Plowman in his Legend of Thomas Cromwell, Earl of Essex, which was published as a separate poem in 1607, and perhaps earlier. See the whole passage, as quoted above, pp. 455—7. In his sonnets, entitled Ideas, he has one "To the Soul" (no. xii.), which is also quoted above, at p. 338 of this volume, and closely agrees with P. Pl. C. xvii. 183—201.

"Upon these [the Malvern hills] is the supposed vision of Piers Ploughman, done (as is thought) by Robert Langland, a Shropshire man, in a kind of English metre: which for discovery of the infecting corruptions of those times, I prefer before many more seemingly serious invectives, as well for invention as judgment. But I have read that the author's

In another note to the same, song 11, Selden quotes a passage from Crowley's edition of the B-text, Pass. V. ll. 392—425, giving it as an extract from "Rob. de Langland, sive Ioannes Malvern."
- 40. In a prose work entitled Hypercritica, written by E. Bolton in 1616, but not printed till 1722, the author praises Spenser's Hymns, and then adds:—"I cannot advise the allowance of other of his Poems as for practick English, no more than I can do Jeff. Chaucer, Lydgate, Piercs Ploughman, or Laureat Skelton;" Address iv. sect. 3 (in Warton's Hist. of Eng. Poetry, ed. 1871, iv. 205; and in Ancient Critical Essays, ed. J. Haslewood, 1815, ii, 249).

- 42. In Ancient Funeral Monuments, by J. WEEVER, ed. 1631, p. 72, we read: "In this kingis raigne [Edw. III.] Robert Langland, a secular Priest borne in Salopshire at Mortimer's Cliberie, writ bitter invectives against the Prelates, and all religious orders in those dayes, as you may reade throughout this book, which he calls the Vision of Piers Plowman."

[1642.] JOHN MILTON, Apology for Smectymnuus, sect. 6. p. 33. Warton well remarks that the catalogue of diseases in P. Pl. C. xxiii. 80—86 reminds us of Milton's lazar-house, in Paradise Lost, xi, 479—488. But the most remarkable parallel is in the employment of guns by the rebel angels (P. L. vi. 484—491, 571—594, as compared with P. Pl. C. xxi. 283—296). As this remarkable passage only occurs in the C-text, it would seem as if Milton had access to a MS.; otherwise, his mention of 'the vision and creed' together looks as if he had seen Owen Rogers' edition of 1561, in which the two poems were published together. But he may have seen a MS. also.
- 44. "It may be mentioned, as a remarkable specimen of the patriotism of David Buchanan, that he lays claim to the author of Piers Ploughman as a Scotchman:—'Robertus Langland, natione Scotus, professione sacerdos, vir ex obscuris ortus parentibus, pius admodum et ingeniosus et zelo divinse glorise plenus; inter monachos Benedictinos educatus in civitate Aberdonensi [1], vir seque erat in omni humaniore literatura insigniter doctus, et in medicina admodum clarus [1], pium opus sermone vulgare scripsit cui imposuit || Visionem Petri Aratoris, lib. i. || Pro conjugio sacerdotum, lib. i. || Claruit anno Christi Redemptoris 1369, Regnante Davide Secundo in Scotia'—David Buchanan, de Scriptoribus Scotis (MS. in the University Library, Edinburgh)." From a note in Mr. Wright's edition, 1856, p. ix.

- 45. MS. Wood 7, in the Bodleian Library, contains (at p. 243—259) several lines copied out of Crowley's edition of Piers Plowman, in the handwriting of Dr. Gerard Langeraine, who died in 1658.
- 46. In the Worthies of England, by T. Fuller, first printed in 1662, we find several particulars about the author of Piers Plowman, all copied from Bale and Selden. Under the heading Robert Langeland, he remarks: "Forgive me, Reader, though placing him (who lived 150 years before the Reformation) since the Reformation: for I conceive that the Morning-star belongs rather to the Day then to the Night. On which account this Robert (regulated in our Book not according to the Age he was in, but Judgement he was of) may by Prolepsis be termed a Protestant."
- 47. "Johannes Malvernius, Wigorniensis, inter primos Collegii hujus [Oriolensis] Socios deprehenditur; is vero ad Regulam postes S. Benedicti Monachus Wigorniensis extitit. Scripsit, præter alia, Petri Aratoris Phantasmata, qui quidem Libellus in plerisque olim Bibliothecis reperiebatur, editus autem Lond. est an. Wood, Historia et Antiquitates Universitatis Oxoniensis; lib. ii, p. 106.
- 48. In his Amenities of Literature (art. on Piers Ploughman) D'Israeli suggests that JOHN BUNYAN may have taken some ideas for his 'Pilgrim's Progress' from the 'Vision.' He says-" How can we think of one, without being reminded of the other? Some distant relationship seems to exist between the Ploughman's Dowell and Dobet, and Dobest, Friar Flatterer, Grace the Portress of the magnificent Tower of Truth viewed at a distance, and by its side the Dungeon of Care, Natural Understanding and his lean and stern wife Study, and all the rest of this numerous company, and the shadowy pilgrimage of the Immortal Dreamer to the Celestial City. Yet I would mistrust my own feeling, when so many able critics, in their various researches after a prototype of that singular production, have hitherto not suggested what seems to me obvious." I think the simple answer is that 'the critics' mostly knew nothing about the 'Vision,' which was not at that date at all easy to obtain, nor was it ever (till lately) a very accessible book. I wish to add that, to my mind, Bunyan's Holy War is extremely like the attack of Antichrist against Conscience and others in the castle of Unity, as described in the Vision, C. xxii. 321-369, xxiii. 53-164.
- 49. JOHN DRYDEN may have been acquainted with Piers Plowman. D'Israeli says (in his Amenities of Literature, vol. i., art. on Piers Ploughman) that "even Dryden, whom we should not suspect to be much addicted to black-letter reading beyond his Chaucer, must have carefully conned our Piers Ploughman; for he has borrowed one very striking line from our poet, and possibly may have taken others." D'Israeli gives no reference, but he probably refers to the translation of Juvenal, iii. 154:— "His blobber-lips and beetle-brows commend."

¹ He refers to Rogers' edition; he does not mention Crowley's, in 1550.

- 50. In 1705, appeared Dr. Hickes' Linguarum Veterum Septentrionalium Thesaurus. He constantly quotes our poem, which he had carefully read in Crowley's (or Rogers's) edition; see e. g. pp. 4, 16, 17, 23, 25, 35, 38, 44, 57, 62, 65, 71, 103, 105—107, 112, 121, 124, 132, 196, 217, of vol. i. He almost invariably calls the author "satyrographus," and (at p. 196) "celebris ille satyrographus, qui se Pierce Plowman vocat;" making the usual mistake of identifying the author's name with that of his subject. At pp. 103, 124, he declares his belief that the said "satyrographus" was deeply versed in Anglo-Saxon lore, and, in particular, was well acquainted with the (so-called) Cadmon's Paraphrase of Genesis! The last remark refers to the allusion made by William to the fall of Lucifer (C. ii. 107); and the notion of his being versed in Anglo-Saxon was probably suggested by his use of words which had been preserved by successive generations of bards as part of the stock in trade of those who adopted the alliterative metre.
- 51. Speaking of Wolfe's edition of Pierce the Ploughman's Crede, Hearne remarks—"Which is altogether different from the Book in meeter commonly called Piers Ploughman, the author whereof was Robert Langlande, a Shropshire man, born in Cleybirie, about eight miles from Malvern hills, and it was written in the year M.III.c. and IX [1409], according to an ancient copy mentioned in a MS. paper shew'd me by my late very worthy and truly honest friend Mr. John Urry, Student of Christ-Church. There is no manner of Vice that reigneth in any Estate of Men which this writer Robert Langlande hath not godlily, learnedly, and wittily rebuked. And from hence, perhaps, it is that both this Book of Mr. Rawlinson's [i. e. the Crede] and some other Satyrical Books, bear also the Name of Pierce the Ploughman." Thos. Heanne, (in his edition of) Gulielmi Neubrigiensis Historia, Oxford, 1719, p. 770.
- 52. In Ecclesiastical Memorials, by J. STRYPE, vol. ii. p. 266, printed in 1721, we read:—"Now [i. e. in 1550] was the Vision of Pierse Plowman the second time printed by the foresaid Crowley;" to which remark he subjoins several particulars, all copied from Crowley's Preface. He does not mention the first edition.
- 53. In 1765, appeared the first edition of the Reliques of Ancient English Poetry, by T. Percy, Bp. of Dromore. Prefixed to Book III. of this collection is an Essay on the Metre of Pierce Plowman's Visions.
- 54. In 1774, appeared the first edition of The History of English Poetry, by T. WARTON. Sect. VIII. of this work is devoted to an account of Piers the Plowman, with notes. In the later edition of 1840, several additional notes are given. In Hazlitt's edition, 1871, nearly the whole of this section was rewritten by myself. The extracts given comprise B. prol. 11—22, B. viii. 1—ix. 58, B. x. 1—182, B. iii. 47—50, B. v. 188—211, B. x. 306—311, B. vi. 176—179, B. v. 81—83, B. xviii. 113—123, B. xx. 79—108, B. xx. 112—117. See also Warton's Observations on the Fairy Queen, ed. 1807, ii. 94, 246.
- 55. "The Author of the 'Visions of Pierce Ploughman' wrote after the year 1350 without Rime." (1778.) T. TYRWHITT, Essay on the Language and Versification of Chaucer, § vi.; prefixed to his edition of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. See also his notes upon the date of the poem, and on the author's name, &c., at the same reference. I quote one of these in vol. i. p. xxxiii., note 1; and another remark of his in vol. i.

- p. xxxi., note 2. He says that Crowley's edition was printed from "a faulty and imperfect MS.," a remark with which I do not agree.
- 56. In the Gentleman's Magazine for 1787, there is a letter by T. H. W., dated Nov. 12, in which a new edition of Piers Plowman is proposed. It was probably written by Whitaker; see vol. iii. p. lxvi. n. 1.
- 57. In 1802, we find a notice of Robert Langlande, the supposed author of Piers Plowman, in the book entitled Bibliotheca Anglo-Poetica, pp. 26—31, by J. Ritson. Ritson notices the opinions of Crowley, Bale, Selden, and Tyrwhitt, and rightly says that the last of these was "too hastey in his judgement" in condemning Crowley's edition. He mentions 10 MSS. of the poem. See also pp. 404—406 of the same volume.
- 58. In a List of Different Poets, dated Nov. 30, 1807, and printed in Moore's Life of Byron under the date of that year, we find LORD BYRON saying: "Chaucer, notwithstanding the praises bestowed upon him, I think obscene and contemptible; he owes his celebrity merely to his antiquity, which he does not deserve so well as Pierce Plowman or Thomas of Ercildoune." We thus learn that Chaucer ill deserves his antiquity!
- 59. In 1810, appeared Illustrations of the Lives and Writings of Gower and Chaucer, by the Rev. H. J. Todd. The author frequently alludes to, or quotes Crowley's edition of Piers Plowman. See pp. 240, 241, 245, 254, 261, 270, 327, 345, 349, 358, 369, 373, 388.
- 60. In 1813 appeared Whitaker's edition of the C-text; see vol. iii, p. li.
- 61. In the Gentleman's Magazine for April, 1834, p. 385, is a letter giving some account of the MSS. It was doubtless written by Mr. T. Wright, at a time when he was meditating a new edition.
- 62. MS. Douce 323, given to the Bodleian library by F. Douce (who died in 1834) contains the following note in the handwriting of that antiquary. "I purchased this MS. of M. Duprè, who had intended to publish a metrical version of Piers Plowman, of which I have preserved a specimen in this volume. The rest he would not part with." The "Specimen" answers to A. v. 107—113, and begins thus:—

"Next Avarice came, but how he looked, to say,
Words do I want that rightly shall pourtray:
Like Leathern Purse his shrive!'d Cheeks did shew,
Thick lip'd, with two blear'd Eyes and Beetle Brow;
In a torn thread-bare Tabard was he clad,
Which twelve whole Winters now in wear he had;
French Scarlet 'twas, its Colour well had kept;
So smooth that Louse upon its Surface crept."

- 63. In 1838, appeared the first edition of The History of English Rhythms, by E. Guest, in which the scansion of several of the lines in P. Plowman is considered. See "Piers Plowman" in the index to the second edition, edited by myself in 1882.
- 64. In I. D'Israeli's Amenities of Literature, vol. i., first printed in 1841, there is an interesting article on "Piers Ploughman." He speaks of Dr. Whitaker as being "the last editor," and refers to the fact that the work "passed through three editions in one year," viz. in 1550,

- 65. In 1842 appeared Mr. Wright's excellent edition of the B-text; reprinted in 1856. See vol. ii, p. xxxvi.
- 66. There is a section on "Piers Ploughman" in Book II, of Sketches of the History of Literature and Learning in England, by G. L. CRAIK; London, 1844.
- 67. In the History of Latin Christianity, by DEAN MILMAN, vol. vi. p. 536 (ed. 1855), there is an excellent passage relating to our author. See the General Preface to this volume.
- 68. In Lectures on the English Language, by G. P. Marsh, 1st Series, 4th edition, 1861, we are told that the proportion of Latin and French words in Piers Plowman is as great as in Chaucer; and that the proportion of Anglo-Saxon words varies from 84 to 88 per cent. See pp. 111, 124, 168.
- 69. In the same, 2nd Series, 1862, Lecture VII deals with "the Authors of Piers Ploughman and his imitators." The following passages are cited, viz. B. prol. 58—61, ii. 7—18, iii. 119—123, v. 3—8, v. 200—262, v. 520—531, x. 2, x. 136, 137, x. 326, 327, 372, xv. 444—453, vi. 280—313, x. 92—100, xiii. 355—383, prol. 216—229, prol. 210—215, iii. 47—50, iii. 59—75, ix. 79—87, xv. 344—369, xv. 386—408.
- 70. An analysis of the poem is given in English Writers, by H. MORLEY, bk. i. ch. xxiv. vol. i. pp. 757—767; published in 1866. See also A First Sketch of English Literature, by the same author, ch. iv. § 27, 28; pp. 131—135. But the best and fullest analysis of it is given in Illustrations of English Religion, by the same author, pp. 77—101. This is the fullest account yet given of the general contents of the poem.
- 71. Parallel Extracts from 29 MSS. of Piers Plowman, with comments, and a proposal for the Society's Three-text edition of this Poem were printed by me for the E. E. T. S. in 1866. This tract is now out of print, but the most material parts of it are reprinted in this volume, at pp. 831—862; as well as separately, in an improved form,
- 72. In 1867, in his Specimens of Early English, Dr. Morris first published some extracts from the Vernon MS., without noticing that it really furnished a different text from those previously printed by Whitaker and Wright. The same extracts were reprinted in Specimens of Early English, ed. Morris and Skeat, Part II. sect. xv. pp. 175—202, with additional notes. The passages chosen are the following, viz. the Prologue, Pass. i., Pass. ii. 158—212, Pass. iii. 1—162, Pass. v. 1—145, 260—263, vi. 1—45, vii. 234—311; all from the A-text.
- 73. The Prologue to the B-text, taken from Wright's edition, together with some excellent notes, is given in Altenglische Sprachproben, i. 327—336, by E. MÄTZNER, Berlin, 1867.
- 74. The Vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman (B. Prologue and Pass. i—vii.) edited by the Rev. Walter W. Skeat, Oxford, 1869. Second edition, 1874. Third edition, 1879. The text, as far as it goes, coincides with the B-text; the notes and glossary are much the same as in the E. E. T. S. edition. The introduction is now partially reproduced, in the Preface to this volume, with the exception of the hints to beginners, &c.

X. ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

A.—CORRECTIONS, ETC. FOR VOL. I (A-TEXT).

 For a complete list of Errata, see below, p. 898.

P. vi, note 6. The explanation is wrong: it means 'a scavenger of Cheapside.' See Notes, p. 130, note to l. 371.

P. vii, note 3. The word lotering is here explained by 'badinage', in accordance with the note on p. 145 of the same volume, where it is connected with the "O.F. losterie, badinage, discours trop libre," as given by Roquefort. In the Glossarial Index, I suggest the sense "cunning dealing", and compare it with A.S. lot, deceit, lot-wrene, cunning. Neither explanation is quite satisfactory.

P. viii, note 2. The explanation 'lean fowls' cannot be right; see Cokeney in the Glossary.

P. viii, note 5. Dele the words "kernels" or else. The various readings, as given at p. 89, footnote to l. 281, should have been given as "& chiriuell's T; cheruelys U." Certainly chervils are meant, not kernels.

P. xi, note 2. I do not now think that pye refers to a magpie. See pye-hele and hele in the Glossary.

P. xii, note 1. The question here raised is answered in Pref. II. (B-text), p. xxi, note 1. The other "Clarke" MS. is now MS. Addit.

10574 in the British Museum.

P. xiii, note 3. The MS. here referred to was not, after all, used to form the basis of Text C; but it was collated throughout, and denoted in the footnotes by M. See the description of MS. XXXIII, in Pref. III. (C-text), p. xxxix.

P. xiv, l. 27. The statement that "the A-text MSS, do not extend beyond eleven Passus" is not universally true. One of them has a twelfth Passus, fragments of which occur in two others. See A. Passus XII printed on pp. 137*—141*, and p. 856 of the present volume.1

P. xvi, l. 10. The statement that the "capital 3" does not occur among the illuminated letters in the Vernon MS. is correct. The initial letter of Pass. vii, l. 122 (p. 80) was printed in thick type by mistake; it should have been printed precisely as in the line following. I may here note that a capital 3 occurs in other MSS. among illuminated letters, and is rather strangely written, being formed like a large capital Z with a thick horizontal bar across the middle of the slanting stroke.

¹ Pp. 137*—144* of the A-text were issued with Text B; this could not be helped, as the missing twelfth Passus was not discovered till after the A-text had been published. See Pref. II. (B.), p. i, § 2.

P. xvi, l. 17. The words "in every respect" are too strong; for in the respect of dialect, the scribe has sadly tampered with the text, by the constant substitution of Southern forms. This point is discussed in Pref. II. (B-text), p, xli, § 9.

P. xvii, note 1. I subsequently found out much more about this unique poem, which was edited by me for the E. E. T. S. in 1871, and entitled "Joseph of Arimathea."

P. xxiv, l. 10 from bottom. This statement about the "eleven Passus" is only true of the majority of MSS. "One strange exception" is noted at p. xxvi, in § 7, where a fragment of a twelfth Passus is described. See the next correction.

P. xxvi, footnote 2. This footnote led to the discovery of the whole of the Passus by Mr. Parker, and we now know of a third MS. which contains a considerable portion of it. See the description of the Ingilby MS.

P. xxx, § 10. In the eleventh line of this section, I have inadvertently written rime-letter instead of chief rime-letter (or head-letter). I must further explain that the example of alliterative metre in modern English here given differs in accentuation from the alliterative line in Middle English, though it fairly represents the metrical form which the old alliterative line would have assumed, if the metre had held its ground till the present day. The difference is, that the modern English example has, so to speak, a dactylic effect, and the lines can be read rapidly; whereas the Middle-English lines require a slower pronunciation, and are less regular, many feet being of the kind usually (but not happily) called trochaic. The reader may consult book iii, ch. v of Guest's History of English Rhythms. The whole subject of alliterative verse abounds with difficulties; and it is quite certain that William was comparatively careless about his metre, and admitted many irregularities. Compare the modernised specimens given in vol. i. pp. vi-xi.

P. xxxii, note 2. Fortunately, we now know that it is Fabyan, and not William, whose calculation is wrong by one year. See this fully explained in Pref. II. (B-text), p. ii, § 3.

P. xxxv, l. 10. Lord Ashburnham's MS. also contains a note of much greater importance; see Pref. II. (B-text), p. xxii, l. 2 from bottom.

P. xxxviii, l. 2. For "upwards of 60" perhaps read "nearly 50." The time of Chancer's birth is doubtful, but it is probable that the traditional date of 1328 should rather be 1340.

P. xxxviii, l. 5. This notion about the scribe's political opinions being indicated by "a marginal note" was suggested by Mr. Wright. It turns out to be entirely wrong; for the said "marginal notes" are an integral part of the text! See this explained in Pref. III. (C-text), p. civ, § 4.

P. xliii. The summary of Pass. XII. is omitted here, because this Passus was not discovered till afterwards. See pp. 143*, 144*.

P. 4. Prol. 68. The reading "Of Falsnesse of [not and] Fastinge" is far better; see Critical Note, vol. i. p. 138.

P. 16, Pass. i. 175. Dele the stop at the end of the line.

P. 26, Pass. ii. 183. I now believe that the reading dume cannot stand; it must either be dune, i. e. din (as in V.), or else dome or doom (as in the other MSS.). Dume for dome is an inadmissible spelling. See Dene in the Glossary; and amend the remark at p. 142, l. 1, in vol. i.

P. 31, footnotes. For 71, 72, H omits these lines, read 71. uppon on H.

And, at the end of the next footnote, read bat al most abyggen H.

P. 66, Pass. v. 263 (and footnote). For lene read leue.

P. 67, Pass. vi. 4. For valeyes, the Duke of Westminster's MS. 1 has the capital reading baches. This is certainly right, as preserving the alliteration, and valeyes is a mere gloss, substituted by scribes who thought that backes would not be understood. Certainly the word is rare, but it occurs several times in Layamon; see Sir F. Madden's remarks, vol. iii. p. 446. It is still a Shropshire word, being preserved in place-names, such as Pulver-batch. What is most to the point, the word reappears in the C-text (viii. 159).

P. 142*, l. 1. There is another copy of the first 83 lines of this Passus in the Ingilby MS., first seen by me in 1883 (see p. 857 above).

P. 143*, l. 11. The missing word at the beginning of this line is "Vicars"; see Pref. II. (B-text), p. vii, footnote.

P. 143*, l. 15. The two lines in question occur also in the Dublin MS.

marked D. 4. 12; see the last reference.

P. 143, note to l. 174. For "type B" read "type C." It is curious that hals occurs in C, but half in A and B.

P. 146, note to Pass. vii. 68. This quotation is from the Vulgate version of Pa. lxviii. 29.

P. 146, note to Pass. vii. 159. hoped does not mean 'hopped', but 'whooped', i. e. called aloud; see houped in the Glossary.

P. 148, note to l. 125, last line. Not Eice; the latter is the form of this word in MSS.

P. 151, note to Pass. xi. 30. daunted does not mean 'made little of', but 'made much of', and is the right reading in B.

P. 153, note to 1. 247. The form vindictam is, however, intended; for the other texts also have it. Cf. Ancren Riwle, p. 184, last line.

P. 154, l. 5. We now know of two other MSS, that go beyond this point, one of which gives us Pass. xii. entire. Amend foot-note 1 by altering 'any other' to 'yet another.'

P. 155, l. 11. The lately discovered Ingilby MS. throws a new light upon 1. 14, which might run thus:—pat he shewe me hit ne sholde but-if I schriuen were. But even thus, the passage is not clear.

B.—CORRECTIONS, ETC. FOR VOL. II (B-TEXT).

 For a complete list of Errata, see below, p. 899.

Preface II. (B-text), pp. iii, iv. With respect to the date (1377) assigned by me to Text B, some excellent remarks appeared in the Revue Critique in 1879, which seem to me of sufficient importance to be given here in a translation. The original article is entitled "Observations sur la Vision de Piers Plowman, &c.; par. J. J. Jusserand, Docteur ès-lettres, Vice-consul de France: Paris, Ernest Leroux, éditeur ; 1879."

After a few preliminary remarks, the author proceeds thus:-

'My principal objection relates to the date of composition of the B-text. According to Mr. Skeat (Notes, p. 19, p. 68, ll. 27, 28; B-text, Pref. p. iii, &c.), we must refer it to the time when Richard II. had just come to the throne, for it is he who is intended in the greater part of the allusions to 'the king'. Mr. Skeat was not always of this opinion. He cites, in Pref. I. (A-text), p. xxxiii, note 1, the opinion of Tyrwhitt, according to whom the B-text was composed between June 8, 1376, the date of the death of the Black Prince, and June 21, 1377, the date of the death of Edward III., and adds: "With this [opinion] I entirely agree." "A more close investigation" (Notes, p. 19) has made him change his mind. This point is of considerable importance, for, as we see, the numerous allusions to the court and to the king which are added in this text, have a different application according as one or other of these two hypotheses is admitted.

¹ The MS. is a mixture of the A- and C-texts; but the former portion of it exhibits the A-text.

Now, in examining these allusions more closely, we find that most of them cannot refer to Richard II. as king. Such as are more vague and might seem to refer to him will apply at least as well to his grandfather Edward III.; only one seems, at first sight, to point clearly to Richard, but, upon examination, we shall find that we must rank it, upon the contrary, with those which can only concern his predecessor.

'Mr. Skeat believes, in the first place, that the kitten of the fable of the cat and the rats (B. prol. 1; C. Pass. i.) is Richard after his accession (Pref. II. p. iii). In this fable, the rats propose to hang a bell round the neck of a cat, of a powerful cat, their greatest enemy, but for whom the rats would be the masters; but none of them are willing to undertake to do it. A wise mouse says to the crowd of rats: "if we kill this cat, another younger1 one will come in his place, and this will be much worse; wo to the realm where the cat is a kitten (B. prol. 190), or, as Scripture says: Ve terre ubi rex puer est." All this can only apply to the time when Edward III. was still on the throne, when the Black Prince was dead or dying, and Richard II. the heir presumptive to the crown. The cat does not seem to me to mean John of Gaunt, as Mr. Skeat suggests (Notes, p. 23); it is rather the king, Edward III., responsible for the tyranny which is being exercised in his name. Otherwise the mouse's speech would have no meaning; we should make him say—"if we kill the Duke of Lancaster, this will bring a young king, Richard II., upon the throne, and then wo be to us!" It is obvious that the accession of the puer rex depended upon the death of his grandfather, not upon that of his uncle John of Gaunt. We must therefore admit that both grandfather and grandson were still alive, and that Richard had not yet been crowned. "If we kill the old cat, we shall have a young king," says the mouse; hence they had not that young king as yet. Moreover, when Richard had come to the throne and been placed under a protector, it could not then be said: "if we kill John of Gaunt, Richard will become king de facto, and then wo be to us!" On the decease of the Duke of Lancaster, Richard would still remain under guardianship, and would have had no more chance of becoming a real king than when his uncle was alive.

'On the other hand, the whole applies exactly to Edward III. in his extreme old age, without dignity, draining the kingdom by his demands for money (as by the poll-tax of 1377), and causing the parliament which had just assembled to repeal, one by one, all the acts of the "Good Parliament" of 1376. The speech of the rat (Prol. 152) relates to these events. The mouse, on his part, also alludes to this "Good Parliament," during which the commons actually tried to bell the cat, and to gain over the government a control much more extensive than before. The suggestion of the mouse (and of Langland), who speaks after the reaction of 1377 and the tyrannical measures adopted by the new parliament, is simple. "Let the cat alone and let him catch rabbits, but let us not in any way attract his attention to ourselves." All these counsels fall in very well with the ideas of the poet, less democratic than he is usually thought to be, who, in his measures of reform, aimed rather at restoration than at innovation. "Let us give up," says he, "this over-bold meddling with affairs" (referring to the parliament of 1376); "you know that it is dangerous and only serves to bring upon you a more severe oppression" (referring to the parliament of 1377); "only be quiet, and you will be less persecuted; perhaps you will be forgotten, and thus you may in a measure avoid the effects of royal tyranny."

'To proceed. Surely Edward III., in his old age, is in Langland's thoughts, when he describes to us this king whom his nobles lead, yet whose true power comes from the commons: "Knyahthod hym ladde... Mixt of the comunes made hym to regne" (Prol. 112). This king was still a formidable master, for he conferred upon the nobles of the court-party the power which the glory of his campaigns and his personal character had formerly acquired for royalty. But the nobles abused this power, and were worse than the king, from whom there was some hope of obtaining a less severe form of government. During his last year, he endeavoured to re-establish peace between his son and the people of London, and Langland could suitably show us him (in this very B-text which Mr. Skeat wishes to date later than the accession of Richard II.) promising (just as at the time of composition of the A-text) certain reforms, which he will at any rate bring about this time, "if he reigns any while." It is strange that Mr. Skeat draws his main argument in favour of an allusion to Richard (see Pref. B. p. iii) from this very expression—"aif I regne any while" (B. iv. 177)—inserted in the B-text and applying so well to Edward III. in his last illness.1 According to him, Edward III., who had already reigned so long, could not say—"3if I regne any while," whilst the words just suit Richard, if we suppose them to have been uttered shortly after his accession. Yet we find the same expression reproduced in the C-text, composed (according to Mr. Skeat) in 1393, when Richard had reigned for many years. But, says Mr. Skeat, "it was retained with some reason, with a new significance; since, in 1389. Richard had, for the first time, begun his reign on his own account, by taking the management of affairs into his own hands" (Notes, p. 84). In other words, this expression—"gif I regne any while," can be applied to a king who has already reigned a long while, provided that important reforms are, at the time, under serious consideration. Now such was precisely the case during the latter years of Edward III. However unpopular he was, people still had hope in him; and a reformer such as Langland, waiting for the coming of better days, could continue to attribute to him, just as he had done 142 years earlier (in the A-text, iv. 32), the generous intention of seating Reason between himself and his son. Only, in 1376, the old king was so enfeebled that there was great reason to fear that he would not have the time and strength to take and keep any good resolutions. His disease rendered it very improbable that he would still reign "any while". Hence the insertion in the B-text of the phrase which is not found in the A-text. During the years immediately succeeding 1389, on the contrary, Richard, then more popular than ever, had no reason for saying sadly—"I will introduce reforms if I reign any while.".

² Rather, 15 years; from 1862 to 1377.

'Moreover, to sustain his hypothesis, Mr. Skeat is obliged to admit that Langland mixes up his kings and commits anachronisms, of which the phrase "aif I regne any while" is an excellent instance (B-text, p. 397, note to 177), and that the king of whom he speaks at the beginning of the Passus is not the same as the one mentioned at the end of it. Mr. Skeat thus explains the presence, in the B-text, of passages which cannot be referred to Richard. Thus in 1. 45 of the same Passus (Pass. IV.) in which Richard uses the phrase "if I reign," we see the king, who can only be Edward III., seating Reason between himself and his son. Richard had no children, and the same line occurs in the A-text of 1362, where the reference is certainly to Edward III. and his son the Black Prince, who was very popular and a friend to reform. Let us particularly remark that the fable of the cat and the rats belongs to the period when the Black Prince was dead and Richard was the heir presumptive, whilst in leaving this allusion to Edward's son in the B-text, Langland would seem to suppose that the victor of Poitiers was still alive. But the anomaly is a very slight one; the fable was inserted entire into the B-text, whilst the passage in Passus IV. is merely allowed to remain; and since the reference is to the grandson instead of to the son, Langland hardly thought it necessary to modify his desire to see Reason seated between the king and his son, i. e. his successor. The passage is sufficiently brought up to the level of events by the addition of the words "aif I regne any while."

'Again, it is to Edward III. that the lines apply best, in which Conscience recommends clemency to the king, and advises him not to use too strict justice. These verses, written at the time of the reaction after the "Good Parliament," have an obvious application. They fit in very well with the speech of the mouse which exhibits Langland as on the side of the commons, but hinting that, in their attempts at reform, they had gone too far. Hence Conscience here recognises that the king has, strictly speaking, a right to punish, but that he would be wrong to use it overmuch: "Si ius nudatur, nudo de iure metatur" (B. prol. 137). Here again we cannot admit that William gives "advice to Richard II." (Notes, p. 20).2

'There remains a last direct allusion to the king, which relates to an absolute monarch, and makes us think at once of Richard II., such as he was in the latter years of his reign. "I am hed of lawe," says he, and Richard, at the time of his deposition, was expressly accused of having used very similar language; but, as Langland's line is found not only in the C-text (C. xxii, 471), but also in the B-text (B. xix, 466), which, even used very similar language; but, as Langland's line is found not only in the C-text (C. xxii. 471), but also in the B-text (B. xix. 466), which, even according to Mr. Skeat, cannot have been written later than 1378, we must of course recognise the fact that the reference is not to Richard II., then an infant under guardianship, but that it is undoubtedly to Edward III., whose government, at the time of reaction following the "Good Parliament," was more arbitrary than ever. Lastly, in the words addressed to the king by Conecience (B. xix. 476), viz. "Omnia tua sunt ad defendendum, sed non ad depredandum," we recognise the advice already given [by the angel] in the Prologue (B. prol. 137), and which we discussed above—doubtless the king has very great power, but reason and justice forbid him to abuse it to the harm of his people. We find ourselves once more face to face with the parliaments of 1376 and 1377.1

'A passage, the explanation of which Mr. Skeat leaves in doubt, is that in Passus XIX (B. xix. 442), where Langland imputes to the Pope the wars which he encourages, and the Christian blood which he causes to be shed. It may refer, according to Mr. Skeat, either to the crusaders (Notes, p. 439), which would be a very remote allusion, or else to the crusade organised at about this time against the anti-pope, and directed with such ill success by the bellicose bishop of Norwich; but then the B-text could not have been composed before the end of 1378. ever, neither of these suppositions is probable, and I cannot doubt that these lines contain an allusion to the Papal wars of which, in 1376, the commons complained in a petition presented to the Good Parliament. "Item, si tost come le Pape voet avoir monoie pur meintenir ses guerres de Lumbardie, ou aillours, pur despendre, ou pur raunson ascuns de ses amys prisoners Franceys pryses par Engleys, il voet avoir subside de clergie d'Engleterre"; Rolls of Parliament, ii. 339. There is then no reason for compelling us to relegate the composition of the B-text to 1378.

'As to the presence in the C-text, written under Richard II., of allusions to the time of Edward, it is not necessary, in order to explain them, to admit with Mr. Skeat, that Langland has mixed up his dates, without regard to probability and the unity of his poem. We must, on the contrary, observe that the author of the Visions did not desire, in any way, to change the tone of them, when he took his work in hand for the third time. The poem belongs to the time of Edward; he has allowed the general reference to him to remain, and did not strike out, in his last revision, the more marked allusions which he had made to the reign of that king. Hence, besides those which we have already indicated, we still find, in the C-text, mention of the king's son (C. v. 43), although Richard, as we know, was not so. We still find Conscience declaring to the king (C. iv. 163) that it was the Lady Meed (i. e. Bribery) who had caused the downfall and death of his father, i. e. of Edward II. Meed defends herself well enough from the accusation of having killed the king; it was, in fact, only the deposition, not the death, of Edward II. that could be directly attributed to her, as having been caused by the corruption which reigned everywhere around that prince. On the other hand, Meed makes us see that it was owing to the counsels of Conscience that the king (Edward III.) renounced the crown of France, by the treaty of Brétigny, for the sake of a sum of money, paid as the ransom of King John.

'The allusion added, in the C-text, to the love of the people, which would provide the king with more money than he could get from the Italian bankers, the Lombards (C. v. 191; cf. Pref. to C-text, p. xvii), applies very well to Edward III. It suffices to recall the sad failures of the Bardi, the Peruzzi, the Bonacursi, &c. An allusion to these Italian failures will be found in the Rolls of Parliament (ii. 240), where a petition is enrolled presented in 1351, relative to the precipitate departure of the "Lombards" who had been ruined by their ill-advised loans, and who left England, leaving behind them considerable debts. All that we need see in this passage in Langland is that he wished, without naming any one, and whilst speaking of the wrongs which could be imputed incontestably to the grandfather, to mark his reprobation of abuses which had been renewed by the grandson. These allusions in the C-text demonstrate what I have said above, that Langland did not wish to remove from his poem its general character, and that it is to the reign of Edward that his remarks, taken as a whole, refer. This allows us to judge with less severity of the "anachronisms" which have been attributed to him (B. pref. v, vi; Notes, pp. 68, 77, 84, &c.). These would be grave indeed, if, according to Mr. Skeat's hypothesis, who finds such anomalies, both in the B-text and the C-text at once, in the very same passage (B. iv. 45—170), where the king, listening to the advocates of Peace and Wrong, is Edward III. when the pleadings commence, and Richard II. when they come to an end. We have shown above that nothing of the kind is the case.

'The principal conclusions arrived at above are, in short: (1) that the B-text was composed before Richard's accession; and (2) that, in the later revision of his work by Langland, he has not inserted any direct allusion to the new sovereign, but has left in his poem the same tone and spirit which it had at the first; and, if he has introduced any criticisms upon the government of the day, inasmuch as they apply equally well to the time of Edward, we need not see in them any anachronisms, nor attribute to the poet improbabilities or a want of unity.'1

Perhaps I may be allowed to make a few remarks upon the foregoing criticism, especially as I am prepared to accept most of it. The best point made by M. Jusserand is that, with respect to the fable of the cat and the rats, it is best to recur to the opinion which I at first expressed, and which was held by Tyrwhitt, that the "cat" is Edward III. himself, and that the reference is to the period after the death of the Black Prince. I wish to point out, however, that this does not affect the date of 1377, which I have assigned as that of the B-text of the Poem. It merely shifts the time from the end of 1377, when Richard II. was on the throne, to the former half of the same year, the date of Edward's death being June 21. M. Jusserand clearly shows that the date is later than 1376, since there is probably some reference to the parliament of 1377 as well as to the "Good Parliament" of 1376. He has, however, wholly missed the reference to Edward's jubilee, though I have pointed it out clearly enough in my preface to the B-text, p. iv. We have only to retain the date of 1377, already given, but with the proviso that the former, not the latter, half of that year is intended, and all will come right. If I stumbled in my explanation of the phrase "aif I regne any while," I have to confess that it is to me, in some measure, a stumbling-block still. If, as seems to have been shown, it stands for "if I may hope to reign yet a little longer," I can only say that it is a clumsy and unidiomatic expression; for the phrase, idiomatically understood, seems to me to imply that the reign is near its beginning rather than near its end. On this point I have said enough; let the reader judge.

In other respects, I think that M. Jusserand, having a good argument, has pressed it too far. I cannot agree with him that the poet had made up in his mind, in the C-text, to make everything suit the reign of Edward III. for the sake of preserving the "unity" of a poem which is more glaringly deficient in the quality of unity than almost any other in the language. We may be sure that William said just what he pleased, and at any rate he must have known that his readers (whether he wished it or not) would be sure to accept his sayings as referring with sufficient closeness to the circumstances of the moment. It was not worth while to alter all his original expressions, but in introducing new ones, he was, of course, quite free. Hence there will be found some expressions which may fairly be called "anachronisms" by a modern critic, and I still think that I have done right in pointing this out, though I did not at all intend to use the word "anachronisms" in a captious or fault-finding manner, and it is true that I have fancied I saw a few more of these than actually exist. But, in pressing the argument against my remarks overmuch, M. Jusserand would now have us believe that the C-text contains no allusions to a date later than 1377, whilst it is at the same time admitted that the B-text contains allusions to a date later than 1362. Both texts are alike in this respect. M. Jusserand's theory obliges him to make the allusions to the Lombards (C. v. 191) refer to Edward III. only; whereas I merely say that we are quite free to refer them to either reign. To the statement that "the poem belongs to the reign of Edward," there is at least one remarkable exception, which I have already pointed out, and which M. Jusserand, for his argument's sake, was obliged to ignore. I therefore again draw attention to the lines in C. iv. 203-210, already commented on in the Preface to the C-text, p. xvi. The last of these lines, in particular, is very striking, viz. "That no lond loueth the and aut leest thyn owene." On M. Jusserand's own showing, Edward III. was a popular king to the last, and such a line, as applied to him, would have been quite absurd. It is certainly addressed directly to "Richard the Redeles," as our author so happily calls him, and to no one else.

P. iii, l. 29. M. Jusserand tells us (see the full account above) that the expression zif I regne any while refers to Edward III. at the close of his reign, and really means "if I continue to reign much longer."

P. iv, l. 10. The cat is not John of Gaunt, but Edward III. See the account above, p. 878. The date is the former (not the latter) half, of the year 1377.

P. v, l. 12 from the bottom. The date of the Prologue (at least) is earlier than June 21, 1377; see the account above, pp. 878, 882. Hence we at once obtain 1377 as being the most fitting date.

P. vi, l. 10. Another explanation of the words "aif I regne any while" is now offered; see the article above, p. 879. I adhere to my statement that "anachronisms" practically occur in the later texts, without wishing thereby to blame the poet.

P. xv, l. 7. This poem on the Mass has since been edited by Canon Simmons, in 1879, for the E. E. T. S., in the volume entitled The Layfolks Mass-book, pp. 3-60, from a transcript made by myself. See p. lxx of his Introduction.

P. xvi. I have a note that this Ashburnham MS. preserves the passage (xvi. 56-91) which several MSS. omit; cf. p. xxiv, l. 21.

P. xx, note 1. This is the very poem reprinted by me in the third volume of the present work, with the title of "Richard the Redelea."

P. xl, § 8. For further allusions, consult Index V.

P. 5. Omit the full stop at the end of 1. 93.

P. 40, side-note 4. There is a bad mistake here. "I lafte" does not mean "I laughed," but "I remained behind," lit. left. (The same error occurs in vol. i. p. 38, first side-note.)
P. 71, Pass. v. 263. For leue read lene.

P. 270, last side-note. Read "Mary Magdalen lived on roots." See Mores in the Glossary.

P. 389, note to 1. 191. Omit the words—"More probably, it was written just after Richard's accession." See p. 882.

P. 397, note to iv. 177. I fear I have explained this wrongly, see the discussion printed above; pp. 879—883.

P. 399, note to l. 199. The right reading may be welche after all; see Welthe in the Glossary.

P. 399, note to 1. 263. This note is correct, and the true reading is lene; but, unluckily, it was printed leve in the text, at p. 71.

P. 410, note to xiii. 118. Omit the words—"In the text, insert," The corrections here indicated were made just before p. 217 was printed off.

P. 425, note to l. 94. Endaunte is not found in the copy of Piers Plowman in this MS.; but endauntid occurs twice in Richard the Redeles (iii. 127, 351), for which poem this MS. is the sole authority. This is, therefore, what is meant.

C.—CORRECTIONS, ETC., FOR VOL. III (C-TEXT).

 For a complete list of Errata, see p. 901.

P. xi, § 4. The note by M. Jusserand, printed above (p. 877), does not affect the date A.D. 1377, assumed for the B-text. It only shows that we must refer that version of the poem to the earlier part of the year.

P. xxv, l. 18. It may be observed that the translations of verses of the Bible here given differ from both the Wycliffite versions, and are independent of them.

P. l, art. XLIV. I have lately had the opportunity of examining the Duke of Westminster's MS. It closely resembles MS. T, being a mixture of A-text and C-text. See further above, p. 853. P. lxix. Allusions to places. For a more complete list of these, consult Index V; p. 513. The allusion in viii. 11 is to the Earl of Chester.

 P. 379, l. 217. Add a full stop at the end of the line.
 P. 380, l. 235. Add the reference for Omnia probate, viz. 1 Thess. v. 21.
- P. 385. The head-line should have been—How LUCIFER TEMPTED EVE; so also read LUCIFER, not SATAN, on pp. 389, 393. For the distinction between Satan and Lucifer, see Notes, p. 418 (l. 315).

P. 406, l. 144. For kyghtes of course read knyghtes.

P. 460, last line. This is quite wrong; for the sense of wokie, see Notes to C. 15. 25, B. 15. 332, and the Glossary. P. 473, Pass. i. l. 2. For ope read boye.

For heue read haue. P. 483, Pass. ii. l. 149.

P. 484, Pass. ii. l. 179. This line is printed as in the MS., and as Mr. Wright printed it twice. But it is obviously imperfect. Insert laugte, i.e. caught, seized; and read:-

pat he ne laugte with his lynage 'ne louyd ffull sone.

P. 490, Pass. iii. last side-note. For exalted read sped. See Hiedest in the Glossary.

P. 504. Some notes upon Richard the Redeles appeared in the "Jahresbericht über die Friedrichs-Werdersche Gewerbeschule in Berlin, (dated) 31 März, 1874. Inhalt, I. Deposition of Richard II., vom Oberlehrer Dr. Carl Ziepel. II. Schulnachrichten. Berlin, 1874. Druck von J. Dräger's Buchdruckerei (C. Feiht) in Berlin." I subjoin a few remarks, suggested mainly by Dr. Ziepel. In some instances, he has not seen the right explanation; as, e. g. in ii. 192, where he supposes pies to mean 'peace.' Of course it means 'magpies,' and the M.E. form of 'peace' was pees.

P. 506, note to Pass. i., l. 57. By dukys, I suspect that the "favourites" De Vere and De la Pole are especially meant, though the latter was only an earl. In 1397, Richard "created his two cousins of Derby and Rutland dukes of Hereford and Albemarle; his two uterine brothers, the earls of Kent and Huntingdon, dukes of Surrey and Exeter; the earl of Nottingham, duke of Norfolk," &c.; Lingard. As Norfolk and Hereford were banished the next year, they cannot be referred to here. Albemarle is Shakespeare's Aumerle, whose adherence to Richard so nearly cost him The dukes of Surrey and Exeter fared still worse, being put to death at the beginning of the reign of Henry IV. We may therefore include these three among the number of 'Richard's dukes.'

P. 506, note to Pass. i., l. 58. So also in Polit. Poems, ed. Wright, ii.

219, we find—"Men with a tabour may lyghtly cacche an hare."
P. 508, note to Pass. i. 99, 100. Dr. Ziepel suggests that the word bushinge here, as well as bushid in ii. 39, was chosen for the sake of containing a reference to the name of Bushy; cf. my note on the word busshes in ii. 152. This is very probable. So also, in l. 100, Be a fals colour means, properly, 'by a false pretence'; but we may further suppose that the 'false colour' was Green, called grene in ii. 153.

P. 508; insert note to Pass. i., l. 109. I doubt if there is any special significance in the use of the word brother; it is probably only a common phrase. If there is any special reference, it must be to Richard's half-brothers, the dukes of Surrey and Exeter; see note to i. 57 above.

P. 509; insert the following note on Pass. ii., l. 40. There can be no doubt that the right reading is "ffor her lither dedis," as this preserves the alliteration. The sense of lither is 'evil,' so that the "yuell" of the text is a mere gloss upon it. See Liber, Luther, Lyther, in the Glossarv.

P. 510, l. 113. I have given up my former idea, that the fable of the "cat and rattons" was directed against John of Gaunt. This makes no difference in the result here given. There can be no doubt about who is meant by the Greyhound; it is certainly Ralph Neville, as suggested by Mr. Adams. See the account in the Annals of England, p. 216, note k;—
"Ralph, lord Neville, had been created earl of Westmoreland by Richard II., after the murder of the duke of Gloucester, and had received other favours; but he was the brother-in-law of Henry of Lancaster, and rendered him most essential service against his benefactor. ... He married, for his second wife, Joan Beaufort, daughter of John of Gaunt, and by her had a numerous family," &c. This helps to explain the 'greyhound' badge, for such was the badge of the Beauforts, as I have already said.

P. 514; insert note to Pass. iii., l. 32. See some remarks in the Preface, p. cviii, as to the Latin quotation introduced here. That I have rightly explained the word liber, is now ascertained; for Mr. C. H. Pearson has kindly sent me the very passages from the civil law which is here referred to. He says-"The following passages are probably what the gloss refers to. In the Codex, lib. vi. tit. 7. § 2, we find—Si manumissus ingratus circa patronum suum exstiterit, et quâdam jactantia vel contumacià cervices adversus eum erexerit, aut levis offensæ contraxerit culpam, a patrono rursus sub imperio ditioneque mittatur, si in judicio vel apud pedaneos judices patroni querela exorta ingratum eum ostendat, &c. Again, in the Codex, lib. vi. tit. 7. § 4—Libertinæ conditionis homines vel eorum filii si militantes docebuntur ingrati, ad seruitutis nexum procul dubio reducentur. By Codex, lib. vi. tit. 50 (49), emancipated children, if ungrateful, lost their freedom." This is a most satisfactory solution of the question.

P. 514, note to Pass, iii. 38. "Perdicibus mos est, ova perdita per alterius matris damna sarcire, ut adoptione alienæ subolis incommoda suæ orbitatis reparent"; Alex. Neckam, de Naturis Rerum, ed. Wright, lib. i. c. 44 (taken from Cassiodorus). Cf. Solinus, i. 11.

P. 516, add a note to Pass, iii, l. 118. Cf. the following extract from a Poem on the Times of Edw. II., l. 285, pr. in Wright's Political Songa, p. 336.—"Hii ben degised as turmentours that comen from clerkes plei. Mr. Wright's note says—"Men who have performed the part of devils, or tormentors, in the miracle-plays, which were performed by the clerks." This is just what is meant.

P. 516, Pass. iii., l. 140. See another suggestion in the Glossary as to the meaning of semitis.

P. 517, Pass. iii., l. 158. Leesinge may also mean 'deceitfulness.' as given in the Glossary. Or it may mean 'waste,' lit, loss, Perhaps this last best suits the context. See p. 896.

P. 517, l. 186. The reading oilles is quite right; see the Glossary. P. 517, l. 242. Governance of getting is lit. moderation in getting, which is what I wished to imply in my note, though I have hardly put it clearly enough. Cf. Chaucer, Prol. 281. Dr. Morris, in his Glossary to Chaucer's Prologue, cites from Becon the following:-

> "Grace groweth after [according to] governance Is an old said saw in each place.'

This is clearly the proverb here referred to.

P. 518, note to Pass. iii., l. 317. Cf. Grafton's Chron. i. 464, 468; Hardyng's Chron. cap. cxcii. Grafton says: "Those Cheshire men were very rude and beastly people, and fell into such great pryde of the Kinges fauour that they accompted the king to be as their felowe [see R. Pass. i. 1. 66], and they set the Lordes at naught; yet fewe or none of them were Gentlemen, but taken from the plough and cart and other craftes. And after these rusticall people had a while Courted, they entered into so great a boldenesse, that they would not let, neyther within the Court nor without, to beate and slay the kinges good Subjectes, and to take from them their victuals, and to pay for them little or nothing, at their pleasure, &c. . . And if any man fortuned to complaine vnto the king of them, he was soone ryd out of the way, no man knewe howe nor by whome, so that in effect they dyd what them lusted."
P. 521, Pass. iv., l. 55. There is no reference here to Sir Simon

Burley, as has been suggested; he had already been beheaded in 1388.

D.—NOTES TO PIERS THE PLOWMAN (VOL. IV).

 For a complete list of Errata, see p. 901.

A few Additional Notes have already been given above, pp. 458-460. They might be increased indefinitely. I take the opportunity of adding a few more here.

P. 3; C. i. 2 (b. pr. 2; a. pr. 2). See Additional Note at p. 458, shewing that the word shep for shepherd is still in use. Cf. the curious form slep, a sleeper, Ancren Riwle, p. 212, last line. P. 7; C. i. 41 (b. pr. 40; a. pr. 40). Prof. Zupitza, in his Note to 1. 60 of Guy of Warwick, has shewn that Price's note (in Warton) is incorrect, and that it is better to derive yede from A.S. ge-eode.

P. 12; C. i. 69 (b. pr. 71; a. pr. 68). See Critical Note to the A-text, vol. i. p. 138. I have no doubt that the reading "Of falsnesse and fastinge" in the Vernon MS. is wrong, and that for and we should read of, as in other MSS.

P. 13; C. i. 73 (b. pr. 75; a. pr. 72). For another good example of ragman, see Fabyan, ed. Ellis, p. 441, under the date 1329-30. Sir Roger Mortimer was accused of making peace with the Scotch, and of delivering unto them "the chartyr or endenture called Ragman, with many other thynges, to the Scottys great advantage and inpouerysshynge of this realme of Englande."

P. 19; C. i. 139 (b. pr. 112). I now recall this opinion, and make the king to be Edward III. See the discussion above, pp. 878, 882.

P. 20; C. i. 151 (b. pr. 128). Among the poems addressed to King Richard II., we must not forget Chaucer's, on the king's "lak of stedfastnes."

P. 20; —— (b. pr. 139). On the goliards, or "ribaldi, qui dicuntur de familia golia," see also Mr. Wright's note to the Political Songs, p. 369; pp. 162, 163 of Wright's History of Caricature; and especially the Introduction to Wright's edition of Walter Mapes, pp. ix-xv. Cf.

"A mynstralle, a gulardous"; Rob. of Brunne, Hand. Synne, 4704.
P. 22; C. i. 162 (b. pr. 213; a. pr. 87). Vnlese (various readings vnlose, vnlouse) in the B-text, can hardly be the past tense, though the context seems to require it. See the Glossary.

P. 22; C. i. 165 (b. pr. 146). I now recall this opinion, and make the c it to be Edward III. See the discussion above, pp. 878, 882.

P. 24; C. i. 207 (b. pr. 202). See the last note.

P. 27; C. i. 229 (b. pr. 228; a. pr. 107). The word ruele means La Reole; see Additional Note, on p. 458.

P. 30; C. ii. 38 (b. 1. 40; a. 1. 38). The following seems to be a parallel passage :-

> "How oft he [i. e. man] falleth in folly Through temptation of the fiend; For when the world and the flesh be at one assent, Then Conscience clear is clean outcast."

The World and the Child; in Hazlitt's Old Plays, i. 267.

P. 39; C. ii. 184 (b. 1. 185; a. 1. 161). Another very early example is in the (unprinted) Wars of the Jews, where we find "ded as dorenayl"; MS. Laud 656, fol. 15 b, l. 2 from the bottom. I suggest (as a guess) that the proverb originally referred to a wooden peg, such as is still called a tree-nail in nautical language; cf. the reading dore-tre.

P. 46; C. iii. 60 (b. 2. 59). Bailifs. "The Bailiff was next in dignity to the steward. He was to rise early, and go round the whole farm, to see if every thing was as it should be. It was his duty to take care that all the labourers in husbandry performed their tasks properly, &c. He was not to board in the house, but to be allowed wages to find his own victuals. Fleta, lib. ii. c. 73; where the duties of his office are set down in detail."-Cullum's Hist. of Hawsted, 2nd ed. p. 113. These remarks apply to a bailiff of a manor; but the reference in the text is rather to the bailiffs of hundreds; see Bailiff in Blount's Law Dictionary.

P. 49; C. iii. 110 (b. 2. 108; a. 2. 76). See Addit. Note, p. 458.

More light is still desired.

P. 50; C. iii. 130. See Addit. Note, p. 459.

P. 53; C. iii. 208 (b. 2. 196; a. 2. 171). See Addit. Note, p. 459. P. 53; C. iii. 217 (b. 2. 205; a. 2. 183). The reading in the A-text should be dune or dome. See the remarks above, p. 876, note to p. 26.

P. 59; C. iv. 51 (b. 3. 48; a. 3. 49). Cf. Lancashire Wills and Inventories, i. 67 (Chetham Society). We find, in the will of John Dutton, 9 Feb. 34 Henry VIII. (1542—3), the following:—"Item, I geve and bequethe towarde the makinge of a wyndowe upon the south syde of the churche of Derresburie, if my name may be sett in the same, and the same syde be made within the space of xvij yeares next ensuynge the date herof, xls." Memorial windows are as common now as ever.

P. 60; C. iv. 77 (b. 3. 76; a. 3. 67). For these Parallel Passages, see p. 834 above. It is remarkable that, in the A-text and B-text at least, we have here a sentence without any predicate. The only way to make sense (in B) is to put meires in the accusative case, governed by bisouzte (b. 3. 87). In the A-text, there is an appeal to the mayors, without any conclusion as to what they are to do; William says, in I. 68, what it is their duty to do, but forgets to tell them to do it.

P. 64; C. iv. 138 (b. 3. 107; a. 3. 103). Add, that Sir Richard de Willeby and Master Henry de Stratforde were imprisoned in Corfe Castle in the 15th year of Edw. III. (1341—2). See the French Chronicle of London (C. S.), p. 85.

P. 68; C. iv. 203. Compare with this passage the story from Walsingham given above, at the top of p. 20.

P. 71; C. iv. 342. See the Addit. Note at p. 459.

P. 77, 1. 5. The passage quoted by Le Bas is from a work wrongly at'ributed to Wyclif, and entitled The Pore Caitif; see Wyclif's Works, ed. Arnold, vol. i., pref. p. v.

P. 79; C. v. 61 (b. 4. 58; a. 4. 45). M. Jusserand remarks that the tally is also still used in France.

P. 84; C. v. 171 (b. 4. 177). I fear this explanation is wrong. may explain '3if I regne any while,' as it first appears in the B-text, by applying it in the first instance to Edw. III., in which case it means—'if I reign a little longer.' See the discussion above, pp. 879, 882.

P. 86. Dr. Luard remarks—I believe this reference to Trithemius is wrong. See Dr. Maitland's Essay on the Lollards in the Eight Essays.

P. 90; C. v. 115 (b. 5. 13; a. 5. 13). See also Hardyng's Chronicles (1543), ed. Ellis, 1812, p. 330—"Of the seconde pestylence and the greate wynde and earthquake, the yeare a thousande .ccc.lxi." That they were believed to be punishments for sin is clearly expressed in the following lines from the Monumenta Franciscana, p. 592:-

> "In nos pestilentia sæva jam crescit, Quod virorum fortium jam populus descrescit, . . . Pro peccato populi venit terræ motus; In religiosis jam nullus est devotus."

P. 106; —— (b. 5. 78; a. 5. 61). A late use of the word pellet is in the story of a master of a ship, who accidentally fired "a pellet" at Greenwich palace (fortunately without doing harm), when firing a salute in honour of queen Mary; see Lambarde's Perambulations of Kent, ed. 1656, p. 474.

P. 109; C. vii. 75 (b. 13. 331). Add that Palsgrave has: "Schepstarre, lingiere"; and Cotgrave explains lingiere by "seamster."

P. 109; C. vii. 78 (b. 13. 335). See the Service for the blessing of cramp-rings in Maskell, Monumenta Ritualia, iii. 335. And see Dodsley's Old Plays, ed. Hazlitt, xii. 255, note 5.

P. 109; C. vii. 81 (b. 13. 338). See Addit. Note, p. 459. For examples of the belief in charms in modern times, see Miss Burne's Shropshire Folk-lore.

P. 117; C. vii. 198 (b. 5. 189; a. 5. 109). This line seems to have been imitated by Dryden, from Crowley's edition of the B-text.

"His blobber-lips and beetle-brows commend."

Tr. of Juvenal; Sat. iii. 154.

He might, however, have found the expression "babber-lipped, beetlebrowed . . slave" in the old play of Lingua, Act. iii. sc. 6.
P. 117; C. vii. 204 (b. 5. 198; a. 5. 112). The expression louse's lather (i. e. louse's ladder) is still in use in Shropshire. It means "the ladder-like breach made in knitting by dropping a stitch."

P. 120; C. vii. 218 (b. 5. 212; a. 5. 126). See Addit. Note, p. 459. P. 122; C. vii. 250 (b. 5. 254). It ought to have been explained that, when Avarice bought things from knights cheaply, he had previously sold them the same goods dearly. This was the system of chevesance, or exchange, adopted to evade laws against usury.

P. 123; C. vii. 270 (b. 13. 274). I have said here that repe should rather be rope (put for roop), but I now doubt it. Repe may easily stand, if it be the pt. tense subjunctive. The A.S. pt. t. was rap, and the pt. t. subi. would be rape. These would become M.E. roop, repe respectively; and I think the subjunctive may fairly be used after if. Stratmann gives rep as the past tense of M.E. repen on the strength of this passage, ignoring the fact that every MS. has a final -e here. Those who take the trouble to refer to the passages cited by Stratmann, will be surprised to find how often he alters the MS. readings to suit theoretical forms.

P. 130; C. vii. 377 (b. 5. 328; a. 5. 171). See the Addit. Note, p. 459. The reader should also consult the note upon this passage by E. Kölbing, in Englische Studien, vol. v. p. 150. He points out that the reference to Robert of Brunne may be considered as to the point, but that the "new fair" mentioned in the Memorials of London and the Liber Albus (to which I may add the Liber Custumarum, pp. 96, 97) is a different thing, and merely a market of a regular kind for the sale of second-hand articles. Dr. Kölbing says—"The New Fair is clearly the same as that which is called in other Teutonic law-books, ballads, and chronicles the Freimarkt. See the instructive passages collected by Konrad Maurer, Germania, vol. xix. p. 1. The present passage affords a new and interesting authority for this wonderful game, which seems to have been well known to all Teutonic nations. The English procedure lies between the description by Ostersson in his Glossarium Juridicum Danico-Norvegicum on the one hand, and that given in the Zimmerischen Chronik and in Wasserschleben's Sammlung Deutscher Rechtsquellen (i. 305) on the other. In Osterssön and Langland there is no reference to an authorised assembly and prescribed legal forms, but they rather presuppose, on the contrary, a wholly spontaneous holding of the Freimarkt by a merry company, which was already gathered together (see Maurer, p. 4). The English example has this in common with that spoken of in Wasserschleben, that the exchange was not dictated by way of penalty for the infringement of some formality, nor did the result of the exchange depend upon any uncontrollable circumstance, but was voluntarily conducted throughout; cf. B. 5. 327—330 with Wasserschleben, p. 305: "und yn der selbigin wirtschafft habin sie undir ynnandir eynen fryhnmarg gemacht und gewillekort, das yderman do awsbiten und reyten machte, was en geluste, doruff yderman kegin des andir ware reyten, was her welde." In the English account, as in the Zimmerischen Chronik and in Wasserschleben, the wares were valued by umpires, and an estimate of the difference declared; cf. especially 1, 331 with Wasserschleben, as follows: "und welchirley ware so keigen und uff enandir yn dem frymargte gerethen wart, die gab man zeu schaezezen czweyn des frymargtis compan nach eren geduncken, welche war unde was eyner dem andern zeugebin salde." That, in the English, the proceeding is described in a somewhat more complicated manner, makes no difference; we must however take particular notice that the words "the cuppe fille" in 1. 340 must mean "fill up the cup for himself," viz. at Hikke's expense; ... for otherwise the decision would not only contradict the statement in 1. 332, but also the simple fact, that the cloak must indubitably be of more value than the hood. That the compensation is so small, agrees with the very small value of the articles exchanged; see "these penyworthes" in l. 334. Finally, the English version (l. 342)

³ I. e. "and whatsoever articles should be thus proposed for barter or exchange in the Freimarkt, should be given to two members of the Freimarkt to value, according to their estimation, what article and how much one should give to the other."

I. e. "and in the same hostelry they have made and voluntarily arranged a Freimarkt among themselves, that every one should there offer and set forth what he liked, whereupon each should tender what he pleased for the other man's property."

exactly agrees with the Zimmerischen Chronik; in this also "every withdrawal from the transaction renders the party concerned, or even both parties, liable to a fine, and the incidental fines are collectively spent in drinking and merriment;" see Maurer, p. 4; however, the fines are here spent, not at a later time, but immediately, for the benefit of Sire Glotoun; so also in Wasserschleben there is mention of "the payment of the appointed fines" upon withdrawal from the contract. I will further observe that, just as in the passage cited by Maurer from Uhland's Volkslieder-

> Und so her get die morgenröt, do iederman zur kirchen get, erst wöln sie freimarkt halten 1-

so also in the English version (L 305) Sire Glotoun is on the way to church, when, instead of proceeding, he is entired by Beton the brewster into her hostelry."

The Marquis of Westminster's MS., which here follows the A-text, has the reading backes for valeyes. This is clearly the right reading in A, as it preserves the alliteration; it reappears in C. Valeyes is merely a gloss.

^{1 &}quot;And whenever the dawn comes, when every one is going to church, first of all they will hold a Freimarkt."

completely astray; the connection of our alone with lone and Lowl. Sc. lane, her lane, &c. is quite right. It is the Icel. laun that has nothing to do with either one, al-one, lone, or lane. I was misled by the statement in Cleasby and Vigfusson's Icel. Dict., that the Icel. laun is to be compared with Eng. lone and lonely, which is undoubtedly wrong. Still worse is the translation of Icel. 4 laun by alone, hidden. All the above English words are connected, but the Icel. laun has nothing to do with any of them in any way whatever. Many of the etymological suggestions in the Icel. Dict. must be received with caution. Thus the E. road is not derived from the Ital. rotta (Lat. via rupta), as suggested s. v. braut; nor is the Icel. einkum the Scotch unco'; nor is the Icel. fja&r-hamr to be explained either as 'a feather ham', or as 'a winged haunch'; nor can the Icel. has be, by any ingenuity, connected with E. heinous; nor Icel. i&ja with M.E. i-the, A.S. ge-pon. The removal of a few such blemishes is very desirable; I have been wholly misled more than once.

P. 213; C. xi. 85 (b. 8. 87; a. 9. 79). The form breigurdle, i. e. breek-girdle, in the A-text, is rightly explained in the Glossary. In Riley's Memorials of London, p. 134, we have mention of 'John le Bregerdeler', which Mr. Riley explains as 'the Brace-girdler, maker or seller of brael-girdles, belts for supplying the place of braels or braces.' This seems to suggest an etymology from F. brael or from brace; both are quite wrong. In fact, the F. brael (rather braiel) is a diminutive form from the Latin equivalent of breek; and brace is not related to breek at all. For the form breek-girdle, see note 2, p. 42, in the Catholicon Anglicum.

l. 164, on p. 310.

P. 237; C. xii. 44 (b. 10. 61; a. 11. 48.) The connection of honesschen with hunch is doubtful; for the etymology of the word, see the Glossary.

P. 239; C. xii. 69 (b. 10. 84). The word leedes, or ledes, tenements, must, after all, be the same word as ledes, men. The latter is the earlier sense; it meant at first the serfs who were sold with a farm, and were actually regarded as mere property; at a later time, it came to mean tenements or holdings. See my note to The Tale of Gamelyn, 1884; (s. v. Leedes in the Glossary).

P. 245, l. 6. (Note to b. 10. 192.) For "only" read "mostly." Though me usually takes a singular verb, we occasionally find the verb in the plural. Thus, in the A.S. Chronicle, an. 1137, we find: "Me dide cnotted strenges abuton here heaved, and uurythen to set it geede to be hærnes." But examples of this use are rare.

P. 249; —— (a. 11. 211). As the word bidowe is difficult, I make the following note. The Breton word is bidéô. Legonidec's Breton Dict. has: "Bidéô (de 2 syll.), ou Bidev, s. m. gaffe, perche avec un croc de fer à deux branches, dont l'une est droite et l'autre courbe, à l'usage des bateliers." Here the word means a boat-hook. As soldiers armed with the weapon were called bidaux in old French, I suspect we have the same word in the French Chronicle of London, p. 91, where we read of "Baskeles, Bydouwers, Spanolfs, Geneveises," i. e. Basque-men, Bidouwers, Spaniards, and Genoese.

P. 250; C. xii. 165 (b. 11. 2). Dr. Luard informs me that the Cogitationes Piissimæ are not really by St. Bernard (though printed among his supposititious works), but by Martinus Dumiensis, Bishop of Braga.

Pers. kimkhá, damask silk of different colours; Richardson's Pers. Dict. p. 1205. Observe also that camlet has likewise nothing to do with camel; it is the Arab. khamlat, camlet; id. p. 628; see Camlet in the Supplement to my Etymological Dictionary, 2nd ed. P. 348; C. xvii. 351 (b. 15. 223). I am now convinced that yerymyled

P. 351: C. xviii. 8. This line is nearly repeated from C. 17. 371.

P. 357; C. xviii. 98 (b. 15. 354). Another meaning of "seven stars" is the seven planets, as in l. 630 of the fragment of "Alexander" printed with William of Palerne. This is an old meaning of the phrase, and gives much the best sense, not only in this present passage, but also in Richard the Redeles, iii. 352. In the latter, the sense clearly is that God's throne is set above the outermost sphere of the seven planets, in accordance with the usual astronomical ideas of the time. See also Milton, P. L. iii. 481. It is remarkable that the same phrase came to mean the Pleiades, as has been shown. That it also meant the principal seven stars of the Greater, or the Lesser Bear, is also probable, but I do not know of any exact proof that it was so. Cf. Addit. Note, p. 460. P. 359; C. xviii. 148. P. 390; C. xx. 203 (b. 17. 237). Dr. Murray kindly sends me a valuable note upon aseth. He shows that I was right in rejecting Dr. Morris's connection of it with A.S. sæd or Icel. sætt, but wrong in explaining the th by a reference to the Icel. set ja. The true explanation is very singular, viz. that the word is French. The O.Fr. aseis (= late Lat. ad satis) was properly an adverb, and the same word as mod. F. assez. It was treated as a sb., having the form ascit in the accusative, as in the phrase ascit faire, to make amends (Lat. satisfacere). This form was adopted into English, the final t being sounded as th (as in E. faith, M.E. feith, O.F. feid, i. e. fidem, and in M.E. deinteth, O.F. deintet, i. e. dignitatem). Hence the M.E. form was aseth, adopted long before assets was adapted from the Anglo-F. law-phrase aver asetz, to have enough. By way of example, compare the following quotation from Britton, ed. Nichols, vol. i. p. 240 -"adounc covendra fere le asset de totes," then it will be necessary to fulfil all (the conditions); where asset is another spelling of aseit. A full account will be given in the New Eng. Dict., s. v. asseth.

P. 395; C. xxi. 1 (b. 18. 1). Strictly speaking, woolward is not 'with wool next one's body,' but 'with one's body towards (or next) wool.' Of course it comes to the same thing, but it makes a difference in explaining how the word arose. Hence Stratmann rightly explains it by "cutis lanam versus"; cf. homeward, heavenward, and the like. See further in my Etym. Dict., s. v. woolward, where I discuss and reject the singular notion that -ward is from A.S. wered, worn, clothed, which has been suggested without sufficient evidence.

P. 399; C. xxi. 14 (b. 18. 16). The Duke of Westminster's (C-text) MS. also has antrous.

P. 413; C. xxi. 283. Dr. Luard remarks—There is a curious account of a demon named Astaroth in the Apocryphal Acta Apostolorum, viii. S. Bartholomew, § 1; Fabricius, Codex Apocryphus N. T. ii. p. 670.

P. 426; C. xxi. 454 (b. 18. 407). Dr. Luard remarks—These two Latin lines were certainly not composed by Langland, as one of them is quoted by Matthew Paris. I cannot find out who was the author.

P. 427; C. xxi. 475 (b. 18. 428). See also Dodsley's Old Plays, ed.

Hazlitt, x. 236, xii. 255, note 5.

P. 430; C. xxii. 152 (b. 19. 147). Canon Simmons says—"Christus resurgens points clearly to the Easter anthem which the angels sung at the tomb. The Sarum Processional has the following:—"Antiphona in die Pasches. Christus resurgens ex mortuis jam non moritur, mors illi non ultra dominabitur"; &c. We have retained this as the Easter anthem in our present Prayer-book."

P. 438; C. xxii. 425 (b. 19. 421). For "The cardinals generally" read "The cardinals always"; and for "most of the churches" read "all the churches." For these corrections, I am indebted to Dr. Luard.

P. 444; C. xxiii. 83 (b. 20. 82). In Alban Butler's life of St. Radegund, under the date Aug. 13, I find—"The nun Baudonivia, who had received her education under St. Radegundes, and was present at her burial, relates that during it a blind man recovered his sight." This may easily account for the connection of her name with that of a disease of the eyes. The Benedictine nunnery of St. Radegund, founded in 1133, now forms a part of Jesus College, Cambridge.

E.—ADDITIONS, ETC., TO THE GLOSSARIAL INDEX.

Illustrations of the words occurring in Piers Plowman might be added in great profusion; but I must refer the reader to the Dictionaries by Mätzner and Stratmann, the Promptorium Parvulorum, the Catholicon Anglicum, &c.; references to which I have given in many instances. I only give here a few extra remarks that I meant to have added, had I not mislaid the notes.

Afyrst. Add—See note to 12, 43, p. 237.

Asken. A good example of asketh = requires, occurs in Cullum's Hist. of Hawsted, 2nd ed. p. 121, where it is said of a truly made deed, written with good ink, that it "wull last as a trew dede asketh."

Battys, pl. small pieces of broken meat, &c., a. 12.69 (in the Ingilby

Bisette. This occurs actively, in the sense to employ (labour), in Pecock's Repressor, ed. Babington, pp. 195, 207.

Canoun, in b. 5. 428, does not mean the canon-law, as wrongly said at p. 566, but the 'canon of the mass,' the part of the mass called Canon Missee.

Chastelet. Cf. "Chastelet, a little Castle, Fort, or Hould," &c.; Cotgrave.

Cheuesaunce. In b. 5. 249, the chevesaunce or exchange refers to the system whereby the laws against usury were evaded. See Staunton's note on Shak. Meas. for Meas. iv. 3, on the meaning of 'a commodity of brown paper.'

Clergyn. Occurs as a variant of clerioun, in the Ingilby MS., a. 12. 49.

Colled. Cf. collée, 'a neck-imbracement'; also coleter, 'to imbrace aboute the necke'; Cotgrave.

Courtepy. In Riley's Memorials of London, p. 212, under the date 1341, there is mention of "one green hood, three courtepies of blanket," &c.

Cracchen. "I cratche violently with my nayles, Ie gratigne. It is dogges and cattes play to byte | and cratche," &c.; Palsgrave.

Culorum. This word was explained by H. Coleridge, in the Philological Society's Transactions, 1860-1. pp. 27-30. It may be illustrated from The Myrour of our Lady, ed. Blunt, p. 330-"vnderstonde that all-wayes when the preste begynneth wyth [i. e. begins to say] per omnia secula seculorum, ys the ende of the prayer that he hathe sayde pryuely; whervpon ye say Amen."

Disgisid. It means 'tricked out,' as said in the Glossary, p. 595; i. e. strangely or finely dressed, not 'disguised' in the modern sense. See the remarks on dress in Chaucer's Person is Tale, De Superbia. In Barclay's Ship of Fools, i. 34, there is a chapter "Of newe fassions and disgised

Garmentes." See Gyside. Dole. "Dueil, m. dole, grief, sorrow," &c. ; Cotgrave.

Douwe. "Douer, to indue, endow, or give a dowry unto"; Cotgrave. Embaumede. "Embaumer, to imbalm, to dress, annoint, or preserve with balm"; Cotgrave. nuenymeth. "Envenimer, to in-Enuenymeth.

venome"; Cotgrave. Eschaunge, "Eschange, f. an exchange, trucking, barter"; Cotgrave. Cf. Chaucer, Prol. 280.

Fauchon. "Fauchon, m. a Faulchion, Curtle-axe, or Hangar"; Cotgrave.

Feffement. F. fiefvement, in Cot-

Felounelich. Cf. F. "felonnement, felly, felloniously, furiously, decruelly, spightfully, curstly, harshly, frowardly, grimly, sternly, sourely, outragiously"; Cotgrave.

Feyrie. The phr. a feyrie = of feyrie answers nearly to the F. par féerie, which Cotgrave explains by "fatally, by destiny, by appointment of the Fairies."

Fodith. Cf. Will. of Palerne, 57,

1646, 2050.

Forster. "Forestier, m. a forester, or foster," &c.; Cotgrave. Hence the surname Foster, as well as Forster and Forester.

Gabbe. The A.S. gabban is unauthorised. It is rather of Scand. origin, from the Icel. gabba, to mock, whence also the F. gaber, which see in Cotgrave.

Grame, v. means rather, in this place, to be sorry, to be vexed.

Gyour. Cotgrave gives guicor as "an old word," and assigns to it the same meaning as F. guide. Handy-dandy. Cf. "Quod he, ane plak I wyll gar Sande Giue the agane with hande-dande"; Sir D. Lyndesay, Kitteis Confessioun. Hentith, for Henteb, a. 12. 66, occurs in the Ingilby MS.; this proves that hendeb is an error for henteb, as already said.

Infamis. Infamia was a note of censure attached by civil and canon law to certain great crimes, and carrying with it certain disabilities civil or ecclesiastical. See Ferraris, Bibliotheca Canonica, s. v. The sense is, that prioresses would have been declared infames the first day, for betraying the secret of confession.

Kete, This word occurs as a variant for strong in two MSS. of Rob. of Gloucester, l. 2585; cf. Hearne's edition, p. 121, l. 19.

Large. The substantival use is illustrated by the use of F. large as a sb. in the sense of "roome, scope, space"; see Cotgrave.

Leesynge. I think I have assigned the wrong sense to this word in R. 3. 158. It probably means loss, waste, or wastefulness. There are four distinct words which take the same form, viz. lesing, or lesyng, three of which are given in the Prompt. Parv. The first is mendacium, or lying, A.S. leasung; the second, perditio, loss, or waste, from A.S. léosan, to lose; the third, solutio, loosing or freeing, from A.S. lýsan, to loose; and the fourth, gleaning. The first and second both occur in | Loueday.
Piers Plowman; see Lesyng, p. | frendes,

Leute. "Leauté, f. loyalty"; Cot-grave. Listres. I have received an important note on this word from a correspondent, to whom I am also indebted for the remarks upon canoun, cheuesaunces, and infamis (see above). He says-'I accept the interpretation of listre as lector. But I do not think it refers to the lector of the Minor Orders. The Minor Orders are and were (in England) commonly given all four on the same day; a person is said to be "in Minor Orders," but the names of the orders are seldom heard, and few laymen know them. It appears from B. 5. 140, that these listres were priests, for they went out "to here schriftes." I think listre means "lecturer," or itinerant preacher, more or less as Johnson defines lecturer, viz. "a preacher in a church hired by the parish to assist the rector or vicar. Archbishop Laud's time there was much talk of Lecturers in this sense. Thus listre is the friar who preaches, as limitour is the friar who begs.'—I may add that the Dominican friars were sometimes called the Friars Preachers. I can even suggest a possible etymology. The Lat. acc. lectorem gave us the F. lecteur, but the Lat. nom. lector gave an O. F. litre, which nearly all the dictionaries ignore. I find, how-ever, in Littre, a. v. lecteur, that the Provençal had lectre as well as lector (= lectorem), and Littré notes that lectre is from the Latin nominative. He adds that the F. form is litre, and he quotes the following. "Litre, ou Lecteur, espèce d'officier dans la cathédrale d'Auxerre; Lebœuf, Hist. des évêques d'Auxerre, p. 800 (dans Lacurne)." But Lacurne spells the word listre, and ignores litre.

Loueday. "Loueday to make frendes, appointment"; Palsgrave, Louyd (for Lowyd), p. 682. The meaning 'submitted' is wrong. In R. 2. 179, it is clear that a word is missing in the MS., and the word to be supplied is lauste. Then the line becomes—'bat he ne laugte with his lynage ' ne louyd ffull sone," and the whole passage means—"There was no kite or crow, that used to look out for carrion, which he did not very soon catch, with his progeny, and put down." Hence the whole article should stand thus. "Louyd (for Lowyd), pt. s. brought low, put down, R. 2. 179; pp. brought low, put down, R. 3. 310. See Observe that lowe is transitive in five passages, but intransitive only in one.

XI. GENERAL INDEX.

This is an index to the principal subjects of the whole work. The references do not explicitly mention the volume, as it is unnecessary. Every reference preceded by "A." refers to vol. i (A-text), the preface being denoted by roman numerals. Similarly, references preceded by "B." or "C." refer to vol. ii or vol. iii respectively. The simple pages, with arabic numerals, refer to the present volume (vol. iv). "G. P.," followed by a roman numeral, refers to the General Preface (vol. iv).

Early English Text Society.

THE Early English Text Society was started by Dr. Furnivall in 1864 for the purpose of bringing the mass of Old English Literature within the reach of the ordinary student, and of wiping away the reproach under which England had long rested, of having felt little interest in the monuments of her early life and language.

The E. E. T. Soc. desires to print in its Original Series the whole of our unprinted MS. literature; and in its Extra Series to reprint in careful editions all that is most valuable of printed MSS. and early printed books.

The Society has issued to its subscribers 122 Texts, most of them of great interest; so much so indeed that the publications of its first two years have been reprinted, and those for its third year, 1866, will follow.

The Subscription to the Early English Text Society, which constitutes Membership, is £1 1s. a year [and £1 1s. (Large Paper, £2 12s. 6d.) additional for the Extra Series], due in advance on the 1st of January, and should be paid either to the Society's Account at the Head Office of the Union Bank, Princes St., London, E.C., or by Money Order (made payable at the Chief Office, London, and crosst 'Union Bank'), or by Cheques or Postal Orders, to the Hon. Secretary, Wm. A. Dalziel, Esq., 67, Victoria Road, Finsbury Park, London, N. All Members who subscribe through other channels than the Hon. Sec. are askt to send their names to him, in order to insure an early insertion of them in the List of Members.

Those Members in the United States of America who want their Texts posted to them, must add to their prepaid subscriptions 1s. 4d. yearly for the Original Series, and 1s. for the Extra Series.

The Director regrets that the issues of the Extra Series are in arrear. The issue for 1883 will be at once completed by Part I of Prof. Zupitza's edition of the earliest English version of Guy of Warwick, that in the Auchinleck and Caius MSS. The issue for 1884 will consist of such two of the following Texts, all now at press, as can be got out; and the next two will form the issue for 1885:—

Charlemagne Romances: Huon of Bordeaux, by Lord Berners, ab. 1532, ed. S. L. Lee, B.A. Part III.

Charlemagne Romances: The Four Sons of Aymon, by Caxton, ab. 1489, ed. Miss O. Richardson. Part I.

Bp. Fisher's English Works, ed. Rev. Ronald Bayne, B.A. Part II. Hoccleve's Minor Poems, ed. Dr. F. J. Furnivall.

" Complaint, " " " " " Alexander and Dindimus, ed. Prof. Skeat and J. H. Hessels, M.A.

The Original-Series issue for 1884 has just been completed by the concluding part of Prof. Skeat's Notes and Glossary to Piers Plowman. The issue for 1885 will be chosen from

The Oldest English Texts, to the time of King Alfred, edited by H. Sweet, M.A. [All printed but the Introduction and Grammar.]
